Railway Pay Accord Gives Brotherhood 10% Increase

Agreement Is Reached on Impasse After Roosevelt Plea.

Contract Will Run Until May 1, 1935

Settlement Does Not Preclude Raises in Lower Brackets.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Representatives of the railroads and their union labor yesterday settled amicably across the conference table the threatening wage dispute by a thorough-going compromise that served to put off for more than a year any further disagreement.

Terms of the final agreement restore gradually, over approximately a one-year period, the 10 per cent deduction from basic wages instituted in 1931. Two and one-half per cent will be restored July 1, 2½ per cent more January 1, and the remaining 5 per cent next April 1.

Thus both the railroad brotherhoods, which were pressing for some immediate increase, and the railroad executives, who hoped to stall off any substantial increase until the first of the year, were able to unite on a compromise.

Directly affected are more than 600,000 employes of the railroads, all members of the 21 unions, while indirectly some 300,000 more may benefit. Restoration of the 10 per cent deduction ultimately will add about $140,000,000 annually to pay rolls.

Deadlock Is Averted.

The agreement removed the prospect of a deadlock and its threat of labor difficulties which caused President Roosevelt to intervene six weeks ago. It immediately brought from him the following congratulatory statement:

"I am very glad that the railroads and their employes have been able to settle their wage dispute by mutual agreement. The country should be, and will be, grateful to them for this disposition of what might have developed into a troublesome controversy. I congratulate both sides on the wisdom and restraint which they have exhibited. They have set a good example."

In addition to disposing of the immediate question of wages, the agreement provides that "no notices of changes in basic rates of pay shall be served by any party upon any other party prior to May 1, 1935." This in effect extends the agreement until that time, after which the problem may be opened again.

Further, the agreement recommends that "in the event that general wage movements are inaugurated," proceedings after next May 1 be conducted Nationally, as now by

Gandhi Flees Irate Hindus

Buxar, India, April 26 (AP).—The Mahatma Gandhi narrowly escaped serious injury today when his automobile was attacked with stones and clubs by a crowd opposing his campaign to assist the "untouchable" class.

Gandhi, who not long ago was considered by many in this country as almost a god, was unharmed, but three of his followers were injured and the car battered.

The little Nationalist leader was returning from a propaganda tour in Assam and Harijan, where he had met extremely strong opposition from orthodox Hindus known as Santanists.

At Buxar the Gandhi party found resentment at a high pitch among local Hindus, which culminated in the attack on the automobile. The Mahatma's appeal for nonviolence—a creed to which thousands subscribed a few years ago—brought hoots, jeers and laughter.

The three Nationalist volunteers with him fought to save the motor-car from complete wreckage. Gandhi escaped from the car while the assault was in progress.

British Critic to Trial For Shooting American

Hamilton, Bermuda, April 26 (AP).—George Stott, an Englishman, today went on trial on a charge of attempting to murder Samuel Hayman Wainwright, American artist, following a quarrel over criticism of one of Wainwright's paintings.

Mrs. Elizabeth Fontaine, 31, a brunette, kidnaped from Washington and probably fatally wounded by a gangster's bullet at Upper Darby, Pa., early yesterday. She is shown in the Delaware County Hospital at Upper Darby.

Washington detectives last night raced with death to the bedside of a woman in Upper Darby, Pa., linked by authorities with the police killing of an armed gangster at Adams Mill road and Ontario place northwest on April 12.

Mysteriously shot in the back, the woman, identified as Mrs. Elizabeth Fontaine, 31, said she was kidnaped from Washington soon after Policeman John A. Caton killed William B. Phillips, an escaped convict, when the latter, with two companions, walked into a police trap.

Lindy Ransom 'Find' Spiked By Cummings

30 of $50,000 of Jafsie Fund Reported in Boston Bank.

Boston, April 26 (AP).—Discovery in New England of a large portion of the $50,000 ransom money paid by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh after the kidnaping of his infant son was reported and denied today.

Late editions of Boston newspapers announced that more than half of the $50,000 which Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon tossed over a Bronx wall as ransom for return of the kidnaped son of Lindbergh had turned up through the Federal Reserve Bank in Boston.

William W. Paddock, deputy governor of the bank, denied knowledge of the recovery of the money, which was said in published reports to amount to as much as $30,000. One report said this had been unloaded in amounts of $4,000 and $5,000 during the last six months.

At Rutland, Vt., Boston newspapers said, a group of 30 or more Department of Justice agents had been concentrated under orders of Clarence D. McKean, chief of the Bureau of Investigation for New England. At offices of the bureau here, the only information forthcoming was a statement the men were there in connection with a "kidnaping." No kidnaping has recently been reported in that section.

Department of Justice officials in Washington said, however, that reports of the finding of Lindbergh ransom money in New England were unfounded and Attorney General Cummings said there was no concentration of Federal agents in Vermont.

For the last week or more, the presence of more than the usual number of Department of Justice agents has been noted at headquarters here and in the vicinity of Rutland. Local police in Rutland professed no knowledge of Federal activities there, despite a report that a number of high school students had been questioned in connection with the inquiry and some had been asked to write the words "Meet me at the Union Station in Albany and I will give you a thousand."

Wild West Lives Again in Kidnap Search; Ransom Cut to $10,000.

Tucson, Ariz., April 26 (AP).—A thousand men, ready to shoot it out at the bat of an eyelid—among them officers to whom John Dillinger and his outlaw gang surrendered meekly here last January—went gunning today for abductors of 6-year-old June Robles.

The kidnapers of the girl suddenly reduced their ransom demand from $15,000 to $10,000.

Quick-shooting cowboys and descendants of frontiersmen, who grew up with the Wild West under the law of the pistol and the rope, joined officers in canvassing Tucson with microscopic thoroughness, determined to find the granddaughter of the reputedly wealthy Bernabe Robles, a cattle baron since Spanish land grant days.

While the search gained momentum and a muttering crowd of several hundred gathered at the Pima County courthouse spreading lynch talk, Robles received a second ransom note in which the abductors said they would accept $10,000 "if you act quickly."

The note reached Robles in a manner not made public. Its delivery was announced by Undersheriff Colby S. Farrar. It read:

"Child safe. We're willing to reduce ransom to $10,000. If you act quickly, child will be returned safely as per instructions. Obey instructions. Z."

It was the second note from the

Train Hits Woman While Gathering Greens.

Huntington, W. Va., April 26 (Spl.).—Physicians today said James Earls, 59, may die of shock and grief over the death of his wife, Mrs. Rachel Earls, 55, who was killed yesterday by a Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad train as she crossed the track.

The woman, chief support for the family since her husband was permanently disabled seven years ago, was selling greens and had sold out her stock. In her eagerness to pick more, she stumbled in front of the train.

Swarms of Gnats Kill Hundreds Of Arkansas Horses and Mules

Little Rock, Ark., April 26 (AP).—Spring farming operations were stopped today in many sections of Arkansas as the worst scourge of Buffalo gnats in years clouded the skies and killed thousands of dollars' worth of live stock.

First reported at Marianna, in eastern Arkansas, last week, the dense swarm moved across the lowland country attacking work stock in the fields as farmers battled with smoke and oil.

In a 10-mile radius of the Ward community, near here, 30 horses and mules were reported killed by the insects within the last 48 hours.

Completing a survey late today, Dr. P. A. Johnson, assistant State veterinerian, said the loss there probably would reach 50 animals.

From southeast Arkansas, near Helena, approximately 50 horses and mules were reported dead, and from the Beebe area, 75 head.

The swarms of gnats in central Arkansas appeared diminished today, Dr. Johnson said, and since they usually disappear as rapidly as they come, he expressed the opinion the danger would be over within a few days.

Although little is known of the insects' characteristics, it appears to inject a toxic poison, and is so small that the animals breathe quantities into the lungs, which are absorbed, exerting an additional toxic effect.

Once an animal becomes ill from the bites, no treatment appears to have any effect, Dr. Johnson said.

Smudge fires built about thickets or in the fields when the wind is not high offers about the only protection, Dr. Johnson said.

Stock Curb Held Vital In Recovery

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

In a report seeking to justify the reasonableness, as well as the adequacy, of the stock market regulation bill which it approved last week, the Senate Banking and Currency Committee yesterday declared passage of the legislation was essential for the unimpeded economic recovery of the Nation.

Citing the stock market boom of last summer as evidence that the speculative mania is still in the country's blood, the committee contended that the inability of securities exchanges to regulate themselves and cure conceded evils had been demonstrated by recent events.

The committee explained that the three principal problems with which the bill deals are "the excessive use of credit for speculation, the unfair practices employed in speculation and the secrecy surrounding the financial condition of corporations which invite the public to purchase their securities."

"Window Dressing."

The report particularly and vigorously defended those sections of the bill designed to lay bare the financial condition of corporations and to prevent, what it termed, "window-dressing" of fiscal statements that are issued.

These sections have become the most controversial in the bill, now that the Senate committee has adopted the proposal for a new agency to administer the law and has given discretionary power to this commission to fix marginal requirements.

Efforts will be made on the Senate floor to modify the sections requiring periodical reports by corporations. The bill, however, is expected to be acted on by the House before the Senate takes it up. The present plans of House leaders contemplate the beginning of debate on the stock market bill early next week. It should be passed after a few days of debate. The Senate also may begin consideration of the bill toward the end of next week.

Provides for Commission.

The measure reported by the Senate committee provides for the creation of a five-man Federal securities exchange commission to administer the legislation. This agency would be given sweeping powers to regulate trading in securities. In addition it outlaws manipulative practices on exchanges and requires periodical reports by issuers of securities.

At the outset of its report the committee quoted President Roosevelt's message to Congress asking for regulatory legislation and his subsequent letter to Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher, of the committee, urging legislation with "teeth in it."

The committee briefly recalled its long investigation into stock market practices and pointed out that "excessive speculation has caused acute suffering and demoralization," bringing in its train "social and economic evils which have affected the security and prosperity of the entire country."

Linked With Depression.

"There can be little question," the report stated, "that stock market speculation is among the most potent of the factors which have contributed to the prolonged depression."

"That the country has learned little

Michael Cudahy Wins Divorce, Son's Custody

Milwaukee, Wis., April 26 (AP).—After five years of separation from his child, Michael F. Cudahy, wealthy packer, today was awarded the custody of his 8-year-old son, Dickie, and a divorce from his wife, Mrs. Alice Dickson Pinto Cudahy, on grounds of mental cruelty.

Cudahy will take custody of the boy in June, when the school term closes. A property settlement is expected to be effected.

Federal Reserve Lists Record in Surplus

Surplus cash reserves of Federal Reserve member banks were reported at a record level of $1,700,000,000 yesterday, as total reserve balances reached a new high of $3,748,000,000, the Associated Press reports.

Gold stocks also were reported at a new high of $7,755,000,000, a $9,000,000 increase during the week. The Treasury deposited more than $13,000,000 in gold certificates with the reserve banks in the same period.

Leukemia Victim Dies After 3 Transfusions

Richmond, April 26 (Spl.).—Leukemia, a disease in which white corpuscles crowd out the life-sustaining red cells in the blood, has claimed another victim in 5-year-old Stuart Ford, who succumbed here late last night.

The child, ill since March 18, had three blood transfusions, but did not rally after the third a week ago. He had been semiconscious since Thursday.

Silver Probe Up to Senate Body Today

Fletcher Will Present Treasury Suggestion to Committee.

Sanders, Gourod, France and Tunney Listed Among Holders.

Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee today will lay before that group a suggestion from Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., that the Senate make a further investigation into the identity of holders of large quantities of silver.

Morgenthau submitted directly to the Senate his "mystery" list of silver holders yesterday, after Senator Fletcher declined, without his committee's consent, to make the document public because of the indefinite character of information which it contained. For the names on this list was by far the most interesting of the three submitted by the Treasury to the Senate.

It contained the name of Everett Sanders, chairman of the Republican National committee, as a possible holder of futures contracts for 75,000 ounces of silver; the name of Albert A. Goroud, an investigator for the Senate Indian Affairs Committee, as a holder of futures contracts for 100,000 ounces of silver, and that of Frank A. Vanderlip, jr., as the possible holder of options for 300,000 ounces.

France and Tunney.

Other names in the list were those of Joseph I. France, former Senator from Maryland, now a candidate for the Republican Senatorial nomination in that State, listed with contracts for 200,000 ounces of silver; and Gene Tunney, former world's champion heavyweight boxer, down for contracts calling for the delivery of 150,000 ounces of silver.

In submitting these names to the Senate, along with several hundred more persons not so well known, Morgenthau explained that they "appeared as owners of 'spot' silver and silver futures as of January 31, 1934, but in these cases the information is not complete."

"Further investigation would be required to conclude the inquiry in many of these cases," he asserted. "In view of the fact that considerable difficulty has been experienced in getting the necessary information in a number of cases, the Treasury does not have the facilities to carry the matter further."

Goroud Explains Dealings.

The appearance of the name of Goroud on the list excited curiosity because Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, is the chairman of the Indian Affairs Committee, to which the investigator is attached. Wheeler has been the foremost leader of the movement in the Senate for silver legislation.

Goroud explained that he was from Montana, a silver-producing

Coroner Facing Second Trial for Removing Heart

Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday granted a new trial in the suit of M. Cleopatra Callas, who is seeking damages of $50,000 from Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald because he extracted the heart of her son, Michael, in an autopsy and neglected to return it in time for burial according to the rites of the Greek Church.

Michael Callas was a medical curiosity. His vital organs were transposed, and, after his death, which occurred under such circumstances that Dr. MacDonald, then deputy coroner, believed an autopsy necessary, the heart was removed.

Some time after burial, it developed that the heart had not been reinserted in the body, and an exhumation was made. The Callases then instituted suit.

Dr. MacDonald was cleared in a prior trial, but on motion of Lester Wood, attorney for Mrs. Callas, Justice Letts ruled that a new trial should be granted. Since the death of her son, Mrs. Callas' husband has died.

Pensacola, Fla., April 26 (AP).—Lieut. Frank E. Highley, jr., of Philadelphia, student aviator at the naval air station here, was killed today when his plane collided with another ship near Ensley. Highley died when his parachute became entangled in his damaged ship and he was carried down with the plane.

Ensign George A. Hatton, pilot of the other plane, bailed out and landed safely in a nearby field.

Explorer Escapes Jail For Overdue Alimony

New York, April 26 (AP).—Carveth Wells, explorer, today won his fight to escape imprisonment for alleged nonpayment of alimony.

Supreme Court Justice Albert Cohn denied a motion by Wells' first wife to punish him for contempt on the ground that he owes her $1,500 back alimony. At the same time the court granted Wells' application to reduce the weekly alimony from $50 to $25.

League Plan to Rebuild China Fought by Japan; Roosevelt, Hull Confer

Officials Here Maintain Silence on Situation in Far East.

British Statement Due Next Monday

U. S. Will Await Action of Powers With High Stakes in Orient.

By Kendall Foss.

President Roosevelt invited Secretary Hull to lunch at the White House yesterday, affording himself an opportunity to review Far Eastern developments in leisurely detail.

No comment was made following the meeting. The State Department continued its ten-day-old policy of scrupulous silence in the face of Japan's assumption of primary rights in Asia, "only permitting itself the admission that no official communications had been made to any one on the subject.

Indications were strong this Government intends to pursue a waiting game and not to lose sight of the fact other countries have more vital interests at stake in the Orient than we. And the first job is still to find out officially precisely what and how much Japan really means.

Diplomats flitted in and out of the department yesterday as they have for several days. But they were as uncommunicative as the officials they visited.

Lindsay's Third Visit.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, talked with Undersecretary Phillips again yesterday. His third appearance in three days gave rise to speculation over the possibility of joint British-American action in the Orient. Others thought the appearance of too close collaboration would be scrupulously avoided.

Ambassador Grew called at the foreign office in Tokyo, it was disclosed, but he did not discuss the new pronouncement. He confined himself to requesting an authentic copy of the declaration. His visit closely followed a similar call by the British Ambassador in Tokyo.

Dispatches from Tokyo said Grew had been unsuccessful in obtaining an official statement. He was told no official translation existed but that an attempt to obtain one would be made, the Associated Press reported.

A spokesman for the Nanking government broadcast a statement to the people of China that the United States had sent Japan a sharp note, the United Press reported, adding the speaker said his information came from private dispatches sent by the Chinese legation here.

Observers thought the idea developed from reports Ambassador Grew was calling at the Tokyo foreign office.

British Plan Statement.

Meanwhile, word came from London that the British government intends to issue a formal declaration on Japan next Monday. The United Press also quoted Lord Privy Seal Anthony Eden's statement before the House of Commons that Britain aims at avoiding all dangers to peace.

Close followers last night felt the next developments in the situation likely would come from other capitals than Washington. It was believed this Government wishes to have others take the lead. Britain shows a realization that she is most vitally concerned in any attempt to warn white nations off Chinese territory, it is felt here, and grounds exist for expecting London will not evade the issue.

The stability of her vast colonial empire is involved; proof that the union jack can be shooed away would never go unheeded among other subject races, experts say.

Hirosi Saito, Japanese Ambassador here, in another interview yesterday, reiterated his belief Japan's new policy represents an attempt to be realistic and put an end to mutual suspicions on Asiatic questions.

Russia Must Bow to Japan, Kerensky Says

(World copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

Paris, April 26.—Alexander Kerensky broke the silence of years today to declare Communism a dead issue as practiced in Soviet Russia because its leaders had failed to recognize the tremendous power of the "white collar" class.

The man who overthrew the czarist system in Russia denounced the Moscow Communist regime as the severest dictatorship in existence in Europe today.

Kerensky declared that war in the Orient eventually is inevitable, but added that the Soviet Union was too weak to fight Japan in the Far East now because its strength was menaced at home by rumblings among the middle classes, whom it sought to destroy by setting up a Marxian Socialist state of the workers. He forecast that Russia would disarm along the Manchukuo border in deference to Japan.

Kerensky overthrew Czar Nicho-

4-Hour Cannon Appeal Delays Jury to Today

Defense Presents Dramatic Plea; U. S. Denounces Bishop and Aid.

By Frank Getty.

An unexpectedly extended plea on behalf of Bishop James Cannon, jr., and Miss Ada Burroughs, packed with fervor, histrionism, and emotional appeal, delayed conclusion of their conspiracy charge trial yesterday.

As a result, the case will not go to the jury before noon today.

In a rousing voice, Robert H. McNeill, chief of the defense counsel, pleaded that the bishop and Miss Burroughs are the victims of "persecution," and demanded that the jury tell the Government it "can not destroy a good woman to ruin a great man."

McNeill had been assigned only a couple of hours for summation, but had used more than four before he brought to a close his denunciation of the United States Attorney, his exaltation of Cannon, his tearjerks for the "sweet, simple little" co-defendant, and his climatic cry that "civilization is in danger if the bishop is convicted."

Garnett Recalls Present.

Somewhat less dramatically Leslie C. Garnett, United States Attorney, brought matters back from the realms of poetry, mythology and medieval history to the allegations of conspiracy to violate the Federal corrupt practices act.

"This case," said Garnett, "can not be answered by going back to the siege of Troy.

"The ballot box is this Nation's 'holy of holies.' Destroy its purity and racketeers may destroy your country."

Miss Burroughs, said the United States attorney, falsified her final report to the clerk of the House from first to last. As a result the defendants were guilty as charged.

Garnett made a point of the bishop's reference to the late Rev. J. Sidney Peters, "secretary" of the disputed "Virginia State committee."

"Cannon has put the touch of his friendship upon his dead friend," exclaimed Garnett, "and has withered Dr. Peters' reputation. He has made a dead man an embezzler as a buffer between himself and conviction."

The prosecutor referred to the Alternative Is Said to Be Powers' Recognition of Manchukuo.

Tokyo Resentful Of Geneva Envoy

Geneva, April 26 (AP).—Indications that Japan may attempt to block the heralded League of Nations' ten-year plan for the reconstruction of China unless the great powers recognize Manchukuo were reported today in reliable quarters.

International circles spoke also of the possibility that the Japanese will oppose Dr. Ludwig Rajchman—the league's envoy to China, who is returning here with a project for helping China financially and socially—in the belief he wields political influence among Chinese leaders.

These reports formed a startling background to a Japanese manifesto of April 17 in which Tokyo said foreign aid to China that had political significance would be opposed by force if necessary.

Chinese leaders, meanwhile, saw in the "hands-off" pronouncement the possibility of Japanese overlordship and considered appealing to the signatories—including the United States—of a nine-power treaty guaranteeing Chinese territorial integrity and economic opportunities.

Fearing that an appeal might result in a "diplomatic triumph" for Japan, however, the Chinese were expected to try through diplomatic channels to ascertain what support would be given such a plea.

The Japanese are said to hold Dr. Rajchman responsible for the collapse of a pact of "nonaggravation" which Japan and China were preparing to sign after the famous Mukden incident of September, 1932 when the Chinese attacked Japanese forces.

It is alleged by the Japanese that they were ready to sign the agreement not to let the situation become worse, but Dr. Rajchman induced the Chinese to submit the question to the League of Nations.

Specifically, Japan will oppose any league plan to grant China a loan, it was learned on good authority, because "China is disunited and a loan might be utilized for purposes detrimental to her best interests." No similarity was seen by Japanese spokesmen between a loan to Austria by the league and possible aid of this kind to China.

Masayuki Yokoyama, Japanese consul here, branded as "fantastic" today the statement of Chi Tsai-Hu, Chinese Minister to Switzerland, that Japan has dreams of world conquest.

Wirt's Charges Held Baseless

'Brain Trust' Allegations Split House Committee by Party Vote, 3-2.

By a strictly party vote of 3 to 2, the special House committee investigating "brain-truster" allegations of Dr. William A. Wirt, of Gary, Ind., yesterday declared the charges unfounded.

The three Democrats of the committee, headed by Representative Alfred Bulwinkle, of North Carolina, decided to file a report with the House holding the Indiana educator did not substantiate his statements.

Minority members, Representatives Harold McGugin, of Kansas, and Frederick Lehlback, of New Jersey (Republicans), will file a dissenting opinion.

Although printed text of the reports will not be ready for a week, it is understood the majority statement will offer a review of the case, citing testimony of the six witnesses named by Wirt as "brain trust" conspirators, to disprove the charges.

The minority report is expected to charge the committee was "gagged" and failed to pursue the charges by calling Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, and others allegedly prominent in the Roosevelt "brain trust."

Girl, 5, Found in Park After Being Kidnaped

Minneapolis, April 26 (AP).—Found a mile from her home after being kidnaped in an automobile, 5-year-old Mary Lou Carline was safe at home tonight, unharmed.

The girl was found wandering in a park four hours after she was snatched as she played with a brother and two other children near her home.

Northern Lights Give Concert Of Birdlike Airs for Scientists

Music in the air, which has no broadcast as its source but is Nature's theme song when she presents that stupendous show, the Aurora Borealis, upon the screen of the northern sky, was transcribed yesterday to a group of scientists, meeting in Washington to report the new secrets they have wrested from Mother Earth.

Two young scientists told the American Geophysical Union's session of this "symphony of the Northern Lights," which flashes bird-like notes, fashioned from pure cosmos, through the atmosphere.

Even as these two workers were telling this story, another pair of scientists were baring another secret of the world: that each thunderstorm's shower of rain bears earthward another shower—a rain of radium, that almost priceless substance invaluable for its curative qualities in the treatment of some diseases.

Not only did E. T. Burton and E. M. Boardman, electrical engineers, tell the session of the mysterious music in the air but they played it—reproduced on phonograph records. The sounds varied from a swishing-like musical note to little warbles and trills not unlike bird notes.

One might hear these musical notes upon the radio, or when listening on the telephone, and, of course, they would be much more in evidence farther north, near the aurora borealis. In some cases, when the Northern lights sent flaming shafts high into the heavens,

House to Grind Federal Teeth In Crime Laws

By Felix Bruner.

As the War Department yesterday offered the use of Army airplanes in the hunt for John Dillinger, the House Judiciary Committee prepared to push legislation permitting the Government to act directly in nearly all violent crimes.

Attorney General Cummings announced he had been offered Army airplanes in the Dillinger hunt, but indicated they probably would not be used immediately. He recently said the Federal law enforcement agency did not have sufficient men and equipment to combat widespread crime.

Spurred by the Dillinger hunt, and by President Roosevelt's insistence upon action at this session, the House Judiciary Committee planned to hold an all-day session today. At the same time, unanimous consent for consideration of anticrime measures will be asked.

Two Crime Bills Approved.

The committee approved two more of the group of bills yesterday. Most of the legislation already has been passed by the Senate, including the death penalty measure for interstate kidnapings. Another would make it a Federal offense to incite riots in or to assist in escapes from Federal prisons.

Other bills approved by the committee and ready for action in the House make it a Federal offense to flee from one State to another after commission of a felony, to kill or assault a Federal officer, to transport stolen goods from one State to another, and to rob or attempt to rob a bank.

These measures will change the entire aspect of the Government's part in law enforcement. They will in effect make the Department of Justice's Investigation Bureau a National police force. State lines, which so often have proved a boon to escaping criminals, will be abolished so far as crime detection is concerned.

However, the bills contemplate no Federal interference with State law enforcement activities.

Since the Lindbergh case and the wave of kidnapings that followed it, the Government has become more and more active in assisting the States in stamping out crime. In many instances, Federal officers have stepped in where there was no clear indication that a Federal law had been violated.

Dillinger Case an Example.

The Dillinger case, for instance, is an example of the limitations now placed on the Federal officials. Although all of the facilities of the Government have been concentrated in the hunt for the man-killer who escaped from a jail with a toy pistol, actually, the only Federal law Dillinger is believed to have broken is that against driving a stolen automobile from one State to another.

If he is arrested by Federal officers, they must turn him over to local courts for trial. Dillinger proceeds rapidly from one State to another in eluding law enforcement officers. Without the assistance of the Government, State officers are at a disadvantage in pursuing such a criminal, because their jurisdiction ends at State lines.

Under the proposed legislation, Dillinger could be charged not only with transporting a stolen automobile, but with fleeing after committing a felony, with transporting stolen money from one State to another, with robbing a bank, and possibly with killing a Federal officer. Thus, the Government would have a firm hold on him.

The bank bill, as amended by the House committee, provides that any one who robs a bank or attempts to rob a bank may be fined not more than $5,000 and imprisoned not more than 20 years. If, in the robbery or attempted robbery, weapons are used or an assault is committed, the robber may be fined not less than $1,000 nor more than $10,000 and imprisoned not less than five years nor more than 25 years.

The committee removed from this bill provisions covering embezzlement and similar thefts.

The act covering stolen property includes physical property, money or securities to the value of $5,000 or more and transported from one State to another. It provides a fine of not more than $10,000 and imprisonment for not more than ten years. The act was amended to punish any one lending money with stolen securities as collateral. The bill also provides heavy penalties for receiving stolen goods transported in interstate commerce.

A third bill provides a death penalty for killing a Federal officer engaged in performance of his duty and a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment for three years for assaulting such an officer. If a deadly weapon is used, the maximum fine is increased to $10,000 and maximum imprisonment to ten years.

Crimes Covered in Bill.

The fugitive bill gives the Federal Government greater law-enforcement power than any of the other measures. It was modified somewhat, however, by the House committee. As originally drawn, the bill covered any kind of felony. As amended, it covers murder, kidnaping, burglary, robbery, mayhem, criminal assault, assault with dangerous weapon, or extortion accompanied by threats of violence. It provides a maximum fine of $5,000 and imprisonment of five years.

The kidnaping bill is an amendment to the Lindbergh bill and provides that if a kidnaped person is missing seven days or more it shall be assumed the victim has been transported from one State to another, thus making the kidnaping a Federal offense. It also provides for the death penalty for kidnaping if recommended by a jury, but provides the death penalty shall not be inflicted if the victim has been liberated unharmed. This latter provision was written into the measure by the House committee.

The prison bill provides for imprisonment for ten years for inciting a prison riot or plotting a prison break.

Dillinger's Girl Friends in Durance

Second Doctor Admits Easing Dillinger Hurt

St. Paul Health Officer Held; Police Drive on Twin Cities.

St. Paul, April 26 (AP).—The wide-flung man hunt for John Dillinger once more focused on St. Paul today with disclosures that not once—but twice—the desperado had gun wounds treated here.

The development resulted in the suspension of City Health Officer Dr. N. G. Mortensen for caring for the wounded outlaw. He was the second Twin City physician to become involved in Dillinger's episodic career.

Some 5,000 peace officers were on the alert for the here-today-gone-tomorrow criminal as suspicion hovered in widely separated parts of the Nation, giving rise to rumors, reports and tips that "Dillinger was seen here"—Chicago, Hammond Ind.; Staunton, Va., and in Pennsylvania.

St. Paul Headquarters.

The Government was prepared to use the War Department's airplane facilities if necessary, said Attorney General Cummings, who recently referred to this area as a "poison spot of crime."

St. Paul, the hunters believed, afforded the most likely digging place for clews, chiefly because of their knowledge that it was from here the archcriminal and his mob at least three times planned their raiding sorties, sallied out to execute them, and then skullied back into their Twin City hideouts.

Spurred by fear that another crime scheme was afoot, the Government intensified its hunt for the fugitive, whose luck still held, though many of the men and women tainted with his acquaintance are paying.

Dr. Mortensen was the latest. He was suspended after admitting he had treated Dillinger and John Hamilton, his chief lieutenant, the middle of March for gunshot wounds.

The health officer's confusion as to whether the date was March 13, 14 or 15 prevented authorities from determining whether it was in the Sioux Falls (S. Dak.) Security National Bank raid that the desperadoes were wounded, or in the robbery of a Mason City (Iowa) bank

Wounds Not Serious.

The wounds, Mortensen said, were in the shoulders and were not dangerous. They were cleaned and the men, brought there by a third party, were to return to the health officer's office the next day. They never appeared. Dr. Mortensen failed to report the incident until shown pictures of Dillinger and Hamilton a few days ago.

It was March 31 the gunner was wounded a second time, in the leg, as he and Evelyn Frechette, his sweetheart, shot their way out of an apartment here.

After that brush, the gunner sought medical attention from Dr. Clayton E. May, Minneapolis. Both physicians said they received no remuneration.

Dying Woman To Bare D. C. Gang's Secrets

Detectives Race Death After Gangster Shoots Thug's Friend.

County Hospital, Upper Darby, reported the woman had but a few hours to live. On the strength of her statement to county authorities a number of warrants were issued for a round-up of gangland suspects.

"Willing to Tell All."

Mrs. Fontaine expressed willingness to "tell what she knew of the Washington shooting," and it is believed her story will disclose details of crime activities both here and in several Eastern States.

She admitted being a friend of the slain gangster, and police are of the opinion that she was here with his gang as they planned numerous jobs.

Local authorities are following a theory that Mrs. Fontaine is the woman whose photograph was found in Phillips' pocket. It was addressed to "My Yankee Sweetheart" and warned Phillips "to stay out of trouble."

Clad in pajamas, the woman was found early yesterday lying in the entrance to an Upper Darby apartment house. Residents were aroused by her screams of "I'm dying!"

For several hours she insisted the shot, which penetrated her back and chest, was self-inflicted. Pennsylvania police, however, discounted her story. They indicated she was shot "because she knew too much."

Soon after word of the shooting reached police headquarters here, Chief of Detectives Frank S. W. Burke ordered Detective Sergts. Floyd Truscott and Elmer Lewis to Upper Darby, a suburb of Philadelphia.

The local detectives will be joined there by Philadelphia Department of Justice agents. Questioning of Mrs. Fontaine is planned should her condition permit.

It is believed that members of the Phillips' gang fled to Upper Darby after he was killed. Police hoped that the injured woman would devulge their hiding place.

Gun Found in Apartment.

A loaded pistol and shotgun were found in Mrs. Fontaine's apartment. Outside, parked at the curb, was an automobile with blood-stained cushions. The woman was shot while lying in bed, police reported. The bullet which went through her chest penetrated the mattress and was embedded in the floor.

Mrs. Fontaine charged Phillips' companions kidnaped her soon after the shooting here. At the time Phillips was shot, Policeman Caton identified one of two men with him as William Davis, also an escaped convict.

Residents of Mrs. Fontaine's apartment told of hearing sounds of a "wild party" several hours before the woman was found. Justice agents and Philadelphia police searched the apartment for fingerprints and attempted to trace ownership of the abandoned car.

Semiconscious when she arrived at the hospital, Mrs. Fontaine mumbled another woman's name and called for "Big George." The latter was believed to be Policeman Caton's victim. Although the woman named her assailant, authorities refused to disclose his name.

Blood transfusions were resorted to in an effort to keep Mrs. Fontaine alive. County police said she gave them a detailed account of the attack after admitting her "suicide" statement was false.

Phillips and his gang were believed responsible for the $30,000 hijacking of a truck load of cigarettes near Welden, N. C., last month. Their "get-away" machine was located here and the gangsters were surprised at a police "plant."

Senate Group Studies Silver Inquiry Today

State and had "always speculated in silver." He said he had dealt in the metal for several years as other people traded in stocks. He said that his holdings at this time were much less than the 100,000 ounces on a future contract attributed to him in the list. He said his maximum holdings at any time had been options on 100,000 ounces.

The committee investigator said Wheeler had no knowledge of his interest in the silver market. He explained he had served with the committee five years, being appointed long before Wheeler became its chairman. He was selected by Senator Lynn J. Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, who was chairman of the committee preceding Wheeler. The latter has been absent from the Capitol for several weeks, due to illness.

Several Remain Silent.

Vanderlip was among those described as a host at the Monday night dinner given to the silver bloc in Congress. He is on the directing committee of the committee for the Nation, which has agitated for monetary reform. He frequently has appeared before Congressional committees in behalf of bills as providing for currency inflation.

Of the hosts at the dinner, in addition to Vanderlip, the names of Robert M. Harriss, Carle Conway and Frank Keelon have figured in the Morgenthau lists as holding on January 31, last, silver or silver contracts themselves or through firms with which they were associated. Harriss has disclaimed holding any silver now. The others have not been heard from.

The name of Mrs. Violet M. Leblanc, of New York, as a possible holder of futures contracts for 50,000 ounces of silver, also was on the list submitted yesterday. There was nothing to indicate whether she was in any way related to George LeBlanc who Monday morning addressed the Senate silver bloc urging such legislation promptly.

Cord Large Holder.

E. L. Cord, motor and airplane magnate, appeared as the largest holder of silver on yesterday's list. The holding of 2,251,202 ounces of silver ascribed to him was partially offset by contracts which he purportedly had made to deliver 600,000 ounces.

Miss Edith Cummings, of Washington, D. C., was listed as holding two long contracts for 50,000 ounces, while W. B. Hibbs & Co., of this city, were down for nine long contracts, calling for 225,000 ounces. Other Washingtonians listed were Harry H. Semmes for three long contracts calling for 75,000 ounces; Mrs. Juanita Semmes, two long contracts calling for 50,000 ounces, and Semmes & Semmes, with two contracts calling for 50,000 ounces. All the contracts in the names of the Semmeses provided for delivery during March.

A. W. Lafferty, of Riverdale, Md., was listed as holding two long contracts for 50,000 ounces.

Robinson Raps Procedure.

The list on which these names appeared originally was sent to Senator Fletcher, but he refused to give them out until his committee had consented. Meanwhile Senator Arthur Robinson (Republican), Indiana, author of the resolution, under which the results of the Treasury survey were submitted to the Senate, said on the floor that Morgenthau had no right to send any of the information to the Banking and Currency Committee.

He maintained this "mystery" list should have been sent to the Senate. Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson agreed with him. Still Senator Fletcher refused to reveal the list. Meanwhile Secretary to the Senate Edwin A. Halsey telephoned the Secretary of the Treasury of what had been said on the Senate floor. Morgenthau then sent a copy of the list direct to the Senate, where it was made public.

No Revolution? Ask Tugwell

"It's Only Beginning," Asserts Big, Bad Wolf of Brain Trust, and "Swing to Left" Is Still Going Strong.

By Raymond Clapper.

The New Dealers are having quite a bit of trouble with their spelling this week.

Just two nights ago President Roosevelt announced there wasn't any revolution going on. Somebody had merely misspelled "evolution" by beginning it with an "R."

But last night, Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, who, after all of his years as a college professor ought to know his spelling, put the frightful letter right back. Not only that, he added that the economic revolution had just begun and that we are not through swinging to the left.

Dr. Tugwell explained what is going on in an article in the new issue of Today, the magazine of Prof. Raymond Moley, his predecessor as the star member of the legendary Brain Trust.

Only the Beginning.

"The real economic revolution is just beginning in the United States," Dr. Tugwell said. "It is a fundamental error to assume that we have reached the end of the 'swing to the left' and that we may forego any further important policy changes.

"I have little patience with those who say that we have come to the end of a period of progress; that we must now retrench and economize, hoarding our gains against a poverty-stricken future."

In his address to the editors Saturday night, Dr Tugwell announced he was a thorough conservative. Many worried persons breathed easier. But after they read his latest restatement it is predicted there will be a scramble to get back under the bed, for, in recent weeks, Dr. Tugwell has become to adult Americans what the Big Bad Wolf has been to the nursery.

Just yesterday such a hard-headed cotton grower as Chairman Smith, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, announced he was displeased with the nomination of Dr. Tugwell to be Undersecretary of Agriculture. The nomination, sent to the Senate this week by President Roosevelt, is pending before Senator Smith's committee.

Smith Plans Fight.

"I'm not going to stand for Mr. Tugwell, as I don't believe he has the practical knowledge essential for him to determine the things that will relieve agriculture," he said.

It appeared last night as if the Tugwell nomination would provoke considerable Senate discussion, particularly as it comes up in the midst of feverish controversy over labels, an argument which is tending to wander into a metaphysical discussion as to whether the Roosevelt program is revolution or evolution, whether it is moving to the right or the left, and whether Wallace, Tugwell and other New Dealers are conservative, liberal or radical, Democratic, Fascist or Communist.

Definitions are becoming so confused that Administration leaders who are together on actual policies differ as to the labels under which they are attempting to sell those policies to the country.

The next step which Dr. Tugwell sees coming out of code making is protection for the consumer. He believes, according to his latest article, that through NRA business is on the way toward eliminating much of the waste hitherto existent in competition and is getting itself in shape to concentrate more directly upon production. But with this, he believes, must come as the next step a double check for the benefit of the consumer—a check on quality and a check on prices.

States Next Problem.

"Industry can not permanently base itself on public deception," Dr. Tugwell says. "It can not even keep running unless it provides, through decent wage policies and rigorously lowered prices, for continuing consumers. And this is the next problem which has to be faced—the one which will be most prominent in public discussion during the months to come. We now have ended the stealthy robbery of a rigid monetary standard; we must proceed to end the robbery of consumer deception.

"The industrialist who went into code and agreement making with the idea that he had found an excellent device for exploiting the public is apt to be disillusioned pretty rapidly."

Dr. Tugwell said industrialists have the choice now of being required to define the quality of their goods and to sell them at reasonable prices, or to be allowed to proceed with high prices maintained by limitation and sell goods whose qualities are mysterious to the average consumer, with much of the profit taken back by the Government through taxes and returned to the consumers in the form of Government supported facilities for health and recreation, old age and unemployment insurance and in other such ways.

"The choice which lies before us is, therefore, a choice between a socially wise economic policy and the application of socialistic taxation," he continued. "I prefer the former method."

Up to Industry.

He said it would be better for industry to try to work out for itself wage and price policies which would insure free flow of goods to consumers as the only way demand for Governmental intervention can be stifled.

"Intervention would be bound to interfere with efficiency," Dr. Tugwell continued. "Many of the controls would necessarily be negative. A great deal of otherwise unnecessary machinery would have to be set up.

"All this would be very expensive and repressive. But if industry, working, as it now has the chance to do, in cooperation with Government, will adopt policies of low prices, high wages and a planned use of its capacity, foregoing speculative profits in some periods as well as speculative deficits in succeeding ones, all the objectives will have been accomplished.

"Using the traditional methods of a free people, we are going forward toward a realm of cooperative plenty, the like of which the world has never seen. It will be no antiseptic utopia and no Socialistic paradise, but a changing system in which we can live changing lives.

"If this be Socialism, let our enemies make the most of it!"

Spanish Crisis Grave; Zamora May Quit Post

President Offers to Step Aside to Avoid War; Cabinet Sought.

Madrid, April 26 (AP).—Spain tonight was still without a cabinet, while President Niceto Alcala Zamora faced the apparent alternative of forming one speedily or resigning himself.

Despite a stries of hurried conferences with leaders of various parties, the president reached no decision on a course of action.

He may, it was indicated, rename Alejandro Lerroux, whose cabinet resigned yesterday, to form another one, bringing into it several opposition leaders.

The country, under a state of alarm declared yesterday, was tense. A spread of strikes, with attendant disorders, was feared unless the government quickly steered out of the gravest crisis in the history of the young republic.

Martinez de Velasco, leader of the Agarian party, refused the premiership offered by Alcala Zamora.

De Velasco advised the president that the only solution possible would be a government of wide concentrations under the present Congress. Other leaders jtoined De Velasco in counseling the president not to dissolve the Congress of Deputies.

Sources close to the president represented him as willing to step down if necessary to prevent civil war. He has been chief executive since a few months after the overthrow of the monarchy in 1931.

State Seeks Chair For Barrow's Pal

Dallas, Tex., April 26 (AP).—A quick trip to the electric chair was planned today by State authorities who hope to gain a capital conviction of Raymond Hamilton, cocksure 20-year-old Texas desperado and pal of Clyde Barrow, the Southwest's public enemy No. 1.

Captured yesterday while fleeing with $800 loot from the First National Bank of Lewisville, Hamilton will be tried here under the habitual criminal act for participahad in the recent robbery of the Grand Prairie State Bank.

Hamilton intimated he did not resist capture because he had no machine gun.

abductors since the child was whisked away yesterday as she was going home from school. The first was delivered to the girl's father, Fernando Robles, operator of an electric store, about two hours after June vanished.

It demanded $15,000 and, although its exact contents were not divulged, it was understood to demand that the grandfather drive alone along a country road each evening at 9 o'clock with the money until contact was made.

Tucson looked like a picturesque garrison as ranchers and cattlemen with six-guns hanging loose, joined police, sheriff's deputies, American Legionnaires and citizen volunteers in a house-to-house canvass.

It was the purpose of officers to rake Tucson from end to end in the hunt for the little girl, and then, if still empty-handed, to take to the hills.

The theory that the abductors might have fled to some wild hideout was expressed by many. Two hours elapsed between the girl's disappearance and arrival of the first ransom note, which hinted at bodily harm in case the demands were not met.

Airplane Ordered to Hunt.

An airplane was ordered into the hunt by Carlos G. Robles, assistant county attorney and uncle of the child.

Two men and a woman were believed to be involved in the seizure of June, although they did not indicate whether there were clews to their identity.

There were a few other clews. A woman living in the isolated Fort Lowell section of the city said she heard screams of a child about 9:30 o'clock last night, before she learned of the abduction. She had thought a child was being punished.

Another clew, details of which were kept secret, came from a deaf mute, who informed Undersheriff Farrar by writing a note. It was understood the mute, whose name was not dislosed, had observed a man sitting in an automobile near the Robles home early yesterday.

Bernabe Robles, who, because of his reputed wealth was regarded as the person at whom the ransom demand was aimed, took a leading part in the hunt. Fernando Robles, the father, remained at the sheriff's office to be immediately available should more definite clews appear. The mother, Mrs. Helen Robles, was reported near collapse.

Former Felon's Tip Wrecks Kidnaping And Bank Robbery

Belleville, Ill., April 26 (AP).—A former convict received credit today for enabling officers to foil a plot to kidnap former Representative William N. Baltz and to rob his bank, the First National of Millstadt.

Sheriff Jerome Munie of St. Clair County said information given by Herman Dannehold, 32, to the marshal at Millstadt, after leading two other former convicts to believe he was acting as "finger man," balked the plot.

Joseph Lacompte, 32, of Dupo, and James Lambert, 21, of East St. Louis, are held in jail here.

Dannehold was arrested, but released after telling authorities he accompanied Lacompte and Lambert on scouting trips to the bank and Baltz's home, in order to get full information for officials.

radio and telephone are not necessary. The song is heard directly by the human ear. It is a "swishing, crackling, rustling sound, like a flock of birds near one's head."

Although science is not exactly sure of what the aurora is, they believe it is a phenomenon connected with the electric currents which encircle the earth.

Radium in Thunderstorms.

G. R. Wait and A. G. McNish, of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, said a thunderstorm shakes more radium out of the air than ordinary rain. The radium is carried to clouds by air currents. The earth is the reservoir.

They were unable to say whether these showers have any effect upon plants. They achieve their results with the use of extremely delicate instruments, which detected the radiation of the radium.

While the Geophysical Society sessions were in progress at the National Academy of Science, another scientific group, the American Physical Society, met at the Bureau of Standards and heard that X-rays have revealed why violins made by Stradivarius and other old masters have tones superior to those of modern violins.

Poor Maple Is Secret.

K. Lark-Horowitz and W. I. Caldwell, of Purdue University, said that the sweetnes of tone and lack of harshness in the high notes was due to the fact that maple of poor quality, as judged by ordinary standards, was used for the back plate.

They found that the front plate, or sounding board, of the violin, should be made of uniformly straight-grained spruce wood, but the back plate should be made of maple, the grain of which should be indefinite—that is, of irregular cellular structure—so as to have the same velocity of sound in all directions.

The geophysicists also heard that the world is reducing—that it weighs less than when put on the scales of science. Dr. Paul R. Heyl, of the Bureau of Standards, reported that he had measured the pull of gravity with new accuracy and found it a little less than the last measurement.

World's Weight Changed.

Dr. Heyl's figures changed the weight of the world and everything upon it, although all scales still read the same. How much the new measure of gravity will affect the earth's weight has not been calculated, but the last estimate was 6,592,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons.

Evidence presented indicated that the theory that the continents of the world are shifting westward was said to be false. Capt. J. P. Lushene, of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, reported that readings taken at Honolulu showed no shift in the Hawaiian Islands.

This was the first report on the international longitude determinations which were made at several stations all over the world. The object of the was to compare the new longitudes with others taken during a similar survey seven years ago, to determine whether there is a westward drift of the world's land area.

Of course the evidence of Capt. Lushene can not be taken as conclusive, it was pointed out, because a shift may be calculated for some of the other stations or the shift may not be sufficient to be measured in an interval as short as seven years. This theory of continental drift in the direction opposite to the earth's whirl was put forward several years ago to explain the bending of the earth's crust into mountains.

Volcanic Dust Causes Coldness.

How a few volcanoes spouting dust into the air might change a temperate climate to one of snow and ice, was told by Prof. W. J. Humphreys of the Weather Bureau. He said that a volcano in Alaska or Java may fill the upper air with dust which will remain for two or three years and help produce chilly and rainy weather.

Twenty per cent of the sun's light and heat could be intercepted by one fifteen-hundredth of a cubic mile of dust being erupted in the air every two years, he said. If this happened over a period of years, the temperate zones would become fields of snow.

Chicago Policeman On Beat Captures Roger Touhy Aid

Chicago, April 26 (AP).—A patrolman walking his beat today captured Ludwig (Dutch) Schmidt, one-time associate of the notorious Gerald Chapman, and made the law's score against the Touhy gang 6 to 2.

Schmidt, 37-year-old bank bandit, was wanted for the Touhy gang's last big crime—the $70,000 kidnaping of John "Jake the Barber" Factor, international speculator. He was also wanted for a $105,000 mail robbery at Charlotte, N. C.

Schmidt's capture leaves only two Touhy gangsters of any priminence still at large. Tommy Touhy, Roger's brother, is a fugitive, as is Frank Dillon, wanted in the kidnaping.

The patrolman who captured Schmidt was William Palmer, who found the bank bandit strolling along the street. Palmer took him into custody without the use of his gun.

Nursing Forum Breaks Record Of Attendance

Dr. French Attacks Selfish A. M. A. Tradition in Closing Speech.

The National Biennial Nursing Convention, after breaking all previous attendance records, ended last night at the Washington Auditorium, as Dr. J. Rollin French, of Los Angeles, attacked the "selfish and traditional ideas" of the American Medical Association.

"The attitude of the medical association toward promoting a more practical and equitable system for the economic distribution of hospital services, may be described as obstructionist," said Dr. French, who is president of the Western Hospital Association and a pioneer in group hospitalization.

From the same platform Dr. N. W. Faxon, president of the American Hospital Association, delivered a plea for the preservation of private medicine, private hospitals and private welfare agencies.

"Preserve us from that day wherein the State directs the thoughts and commands the action in all activities of its citizens," he said. "Provide a hospital for the needy, but allow each patient the opportunity of choosing another hospital, if through self-denial or ability he has sufficient means to command its services. Let us accept the responsibility of the State to its citizens when in need, but not forget its equal responsibility to those who carry their own burdens."

Jane Delano Honored.

A feature of the final day's ceremonies was the dedication of a memorial, in the Red Cross Garden, to Jane A. Delano and the 296 American nurses who died in the World War.

Before his address last night, Dr. French praised the District Medical Society for its support of a group hospitalization plan, but declared that the plan is "too limited."

At the Auditorium, Dr. French began his attack on the American Medical Association with the statement that "at least 60 per cent of our people would have to sacrifice life if they were forced to depend on their ability to pay cash for medical and hospital service in time of need."

"This trend has prompted the conclusion in the minds of many," he said, "that we are headed for State or socialized medicine—a conclusion which we can not deny unless thinking leaders in all allied organizations associated with treatment service cooperate in support of more practical methods for distributing the cost of health service."

Favors Insurance Principle.

He advocated application of the insurance principle as a solution of the difficulty.

In contrast with the views presented by Dr. French, Dr. Faxon struck a note of "rugged individualism."

"What a distance has been travelled," he said. "Charity in colonial America meant a pauper's oath and disgrace in return for enough food to barely keep one alive. The 'necessities of life' in 1931 meant food, clothing, shelter and medical care simply because one is unemployed.'"

Russia Must Bow, Kerensky States

las II in March, 1917, only to be ousted himself by the Bolsheviks led by Lenin and Trotsky—the one now dead, the other an harassed fugitive. Kerensky ruled from March until November, 1917, but fled when the Bolsheviks seized Russia and set up their proletarian dictatorship. He has lived in exile since, aloof and pondering on the changes in Russia which gave birth to his opinions today. He never has been a Communist, but was opposed to the injustices of the Czars.

Communism Most Severe.

"Among all the dictatorships existing in Europe today," he said, "Communism is the most severe. No other has sought to exterminate all creative forces of a people, to kill National sentiment or to crush native qualities of race.

"All dictatorships, however, repeat the methods and manners of Bolshevism.

"In Russia, it was the intellectual class which was crushed. In Germany, under the Nazi dictatorship, they seek to crush another class, the Jews.

"The duty of all men, regardless of race or class, is to unite in a new internationale, to fight for personal liberties and the resurrection of Democracy—otherwise these dictatorial regimes will suppress the few remaining privileges and the personality of man, the finest thing in human history."

Kerensky was of the opinion that neither communistic nor other dictatorships would expand further in Europe. He contended that no other country would accept the compression of its liberties, but, that on the contrary, the pendulum was swinging back, and certain States now under dictatorships would gradually restore constitutional liberties.

Jenny Dolly Apepars In French Tax Case

Paris, April 26 (AP).—Jenny Dolly, member of the American Dolly sisters dance team, today made one of her bare public appearances since a motor accident in March, appearing in court to face charges of failure to pay a luxury tax on a $260,000 ring bought at Cannes in 1928.

The government demands a tax of approximately $32,500. At a recent auction sale of Miss Dolly's jewels, however, the ring brought only about $105,625.

bishop "arrogantly wrapping the robes of the church about him," and declared that if Cannon "loved anything above money, it has not been brought out at this trial."

As for the bishop's opposition to Gov. Alfred E. Smith in 1928, Garnett declared the churchman should have "blessed" the Democratic nominee, "for he gave him a chance to get out of a financial hole."

Attacking Cannon's alleged misappropriation of campaign contributions, Garnett declared that "instead of learning at his mother's knee to hate the legalized liquor traffic, he should have learned the difference between 'meum' and 'teum'." He pictured the surprise of E. C. Jameson and former U. S. Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen had they known the bishop would use their contributions "to meet his personal obligations."

Committee "Imaginary."

Miss Burroughs, Garnett declared, "went into the cesspool of politics with her eyes open," and must accept the responsibility.

The "Virginia State committee" of anti-Smith Democrats, to which, the defense alleges, went $48,000 of "Jameson money," was declared by the United States Attorney to be merely a product of Cannon's "imagination."

"There was no State committee," said Garnett, stressing his words, just before court adjourned. The prosecutor will continue his summation this morning.

McNeill's four-hour appeal to the jurors ran the gamut from poetical references to virulent denunciation of the prosecution. Through most of it, the bishop and Miss Burroughs sat with closed eyes. Only when his attorney pleaded that at Cannon's age men were prone to forget details did the bishop sit up and take smiling notice.

The defense attorney insisted he had proved that there was a State committee working against Al Smith in Virginia in 1928.

"Not only was there a State committee, but it was the most zealous and effective ever gathered together," he insisted.

Uses Blackboard.

With the aid of a blackboard, McNeill traced the receipts and disbursements, as the defense understands them, of the 1928 campaign.

Jameson, the New York insurance man, gave $65,300; former Senator Frelinghuysen, $20,000; while $41,000 was received from "general contributions," according to McNeill. Disbursements, he listed as:

"Headquarters committee, $58,000.

"Frank P. Dunford, $32,000.

"James Cannon, jr., for expenses, $4,000.

"Virginia, for all purposes, $32,300."

These figures later were ridiculed and denounced by Garnett, who pointed out that testimony during the trial has shown them to be "false in every instance."

McNeill occasionally went back to famous martyrs of the past for parallels with his client's predicament. He warned that "you can punish too much, until the wrath of the people is aroused and truth prevails."

Bishop Cannon, he said, was "a monument of purity and character." The case, he declared, was being tried "upon the theory that 'Cannon must be destroyed.'"

"This man is being crucified because of his principles," McNeill shouted. "Those disappointed in the 1928 campaign were vengeful."

Concluding, he referred to Molloch, declaring the prosecution sought "this simple, sweet little woman" as a victim.

"She was just a rag and a bone and a hank of hair to them," he cried. "And they said, 'Throw her in!'"

Stock Market Bill Held Vital To Recovery

Senate Banking Committee Hits Speculative Mania as Peril to Nation.

from the catastrophe of 1929 is evidenced by the speculative boom during the summer of 1933, which ended with the usual disastrous results to investors," the report continued. If our present progress toward prosperity is not to be impeded from time to time by the financial collapse invariably following artificial inflation of security prices, it is essential that the Federal Government adopt measures which will enable it to stem the speculative tide whenever necessary."

Contending stock exchanges could not regulate themselves or the securities business, the committee pointed out that "during periods of popular agitation or when legislative action has been threatened, the exchanges have taken steps to raise the standards for the conduct of business by their members and to require corporations to furnish more adequate information for the benefit of investors."

"Such attempts, however, far from precluding the necessity for legislative action, emphasize its need," the committee added.

Report Cites Reasons.

Among reasons cited by the report why the exchanges could not through self-regulation cure the existing evils was that "their adherence to the view that manipulation, pool activities and the creation of illusory 'price mirages' are proper and legitimate, except where certain technical violations of their rules are involved, is inconsistent with the type of regulation the public interest demands."

"The inability of the stock exchange authorities even to discover the flagrant abuses unearthed by the committee indicates that a Federal regulatory body could deal with such practices more effectively than the exchanges themselves," the committee said.

The committee also contended that the exchanges have attempted unsuccessfully to bring about an improvement in the type of financial reports filed by corporations. Issuers in many cases have refused to file "adequate" information and have threatened to withdraw their listings if compelled to, the report explained.

Reform Seen in Bill.

"The present bill," the report stated, "would effectuate a reform which the exchanges themselves have been advocating for many years. Hence their efforts to enlist the opposition of corporations to the proposed legislation is difficult to reconcile with their public utterances in the past."

The opposition which has been stirred up against the sections dealing with corporate reports, the committee asserted, appears to be based "largely on a misunderstanding of the bill, the fear of exposure on the part of some corporations which have heretofore managed to withhold from investors their true financial condition, or the efforts of stock brokers, hostile to other portions of the bill, who are endeavoring to marshal all possible aid in defeating the bill by inciting their customers to protest."

"The principal objections directed against the provisions for corporate reporting is that they constitute a veiled attempt to invest a governmental commission with the power to interfere in the management of corporations," the report continued. "The committee has no such intention and feels that the bill furnishes no justification for such an interpretation."

Nor would these sections of the bill place an "undue burden" on corporations by compelling them to keep their accounts in a manner prescribed by the commission, the committee asserted.

Railway Wage Accord Grants Gradual Raise

the Railway Labor Executives Association and the Conference Committee of Managers. None of the brotherhoods, nor the carriers, are bound, however, to act together.

Announcement of the compromise came just 15 minutes after both factions convened about the conference table, on the tenth floor of the Transportation Building. A. F. Whitney, chairman of the Brotherhoods' committee, erred at first in giving newspapermen figures of the agreement but hastily corrected himself.

All but the actual signing of the agreement occurred at conferences the day and night before, when representatives of both factions threshed out, in a large room murky with smoke, an acceptable compromise. They succeeded alone where the mediation of Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation, had failed the week before.

Signing of the agreement by the 21 labor representatives and the nine managers, headed by W. F. Thiehoff, prompted a flurry of statements in which both factions, in amiable language, emphasized their desire to cooperate with President Roosevelt by bringing negotiations to an early end.

"Railway employes have been impressed throughout," said Mr. Whitney, "with the necessity for increases in wages and purchasing power. We have joined in the agreement to comply with wishes of President Roosevelt in the interest of National recovery. This will stabilize wages on American railroads and give all concerned a breathing spell."

Sought to Avoid Trouble.

"We faced the choice," Mr. Thiehoff followed up, "of reaching a settlement with the employes or of carrying the wage controversy to a conclusion under the law with its attendant uncertainty and disturbing effects. In the interest of stabilizing the railroad situation now, so as to promote the National recovery program, we chose the former course.

"In so doing we have been mindful of the considerations of National welfare pressed upon us by the President, of the untiring efforts of the Federal coordinator of transportation to compose the situation and of the forebearance of those who have represented the employes."

The railroad agreement, which follows closely the recent automobile and bituminous coal settlements, was hailed as the result of "straight-forward dealing across the table" in which all were heard. Although the "official positions" of the managers had been for an additional 5 per cent cut July 1, and the employes for an increase of 10 per cent above basic rates, discussions were much closer together.

One paragraph in the agreement bore reference to Mr. Roosevelt's proposal that existing wages be continued six months and increased earnings go into maintenance for the benefit of workers on part time or furloughs. The President considered this more of a help to labor than a wage increase at this time, but the labor representatives considered it impossible of enforcement.

"With respect to employes in the lower paid brackets," the agreement said, "the foregoing shall not be taken to prevent discussion and adjustment between individual carriers and organizations with respect to spreading employment or of the matter of opportunity for increased earnings of part-time employes, but changes in basic rates shall in no event be involved."

G.O.P. to Seek Tariff Checks On President

Hull and Wallace Are Questioned by Reed on New Methods.

(Associated Press.)

Republican opposition to the Roosevelt reciprocal tariff bill congealed last night into a vigorous drive for an amendment assuring hearings to affected industries before any change is made in the duty on their products.

This became unmistakably clear after a day of hearings in which Senator Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, and other Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee fired a broadside of sharply worded cross-examination at two Cabinet members, Secretaries Hull and Wallace.

At one point, Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, objected to what he termed "partisan heckling," and at another Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, interposed the remark that "no amount of hearings would convince the Senator from Pennsylvania that it was advisable to decrease any tariff rate."

Wallace Explains Purposes.

In an extemporaneous explanation of the purposes of the bill, Wallace said it was intended to increase foreign purchasing power, and if successful the Administration's acreage control program could be curtailed or eliminated, which, he added, "would make us at the Department of Agriculture very happy."

He pleaded with the committee for a Non-Partisan approach to the problem, asserting that "the Executive branch of the Government is better able to formulate a well rounded policy than Congress" and that with "suitable advisors the President could determine those articles of which we could accept more from abroad with least damage to our industrial structure."

"Would you regard it as a partisan contention to say that no one should be condemned unheard," asked Reed.

"I do not understand your point," Wallace replied.

"Would you oppose an amendment requiring that notice be given to industries and they be given an opportunity to present their side of the case before the tariff on their products is changed?"

"I do not know what the stand of the Administration would be on that; it seems to me to be a matter of common sense and executive routine."

The Senator from Pennsylvania means to intimate," interruped Clark, "that these tariff barons have been protected for years and have a vested right in their tariff protection and that to take it away from them would be a criminal procedure."

Interested in Workers.

"I was not talking about tariff barons," Reed rejoined. "I am more interested in the workers in the mills and factories."

Reed then swung into the question of what Wallace said or did not say about the inefficiency of the beet sugar and the lace industries, recalling that in his preliminary statement Wallace had said the President was opposed to the expansion of industries which were inefficient from the point of view of their ability to meet world competition.

"Did you say before another committee, as reported in the papers that the beet sugar and lace industries were inefficient?" Reed asked.

"I probably have said that. I am not sure of the exact wording."

"Do you regard them as such?"

"From the standpoint of my definition they are decidedly inefficient industries."

Reed tried unsuccessfully to get from both Hull and Wallace a statement as to what commodities the Administration might have in mind for tariff adjustments under the measure.

The former thought it inadvisable to make such a statement and Wallace declared it would take study to determine just which would be included.

"What do you think of a policy of delegating the taxing power in this fashion to the Administration," Reed asked. "Is it not apt to lead to imposition of taxes without hearings?"

"It would be much fairer for the victims than these cases where representatives of a relatively few industries sit with committees behind closed doors and write a tariff bill by log rolling."

"The benefits accruing to the operators as the result of the semiannual inspection of motor vehicles are obvious," said a division bulletin.

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality
Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. They should pour out thru the bladder 3 pints of fluid a day which contains 4 pounds of waste matter.
If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.
If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.
But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes. Your common sense will tell you that this is impossible. Treatments of this nature may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old, reliable relief that contains no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934. Foster-Milburn Co.

Largest Selling Scotch Whisky in the WORLD!
...Which is the largest selling Scotch Whisky in Scotland? White Horse! In Great Britain? In the United States? In the entire world? White Horse . . . Your first drink will tell you why. Experts—blindfolded—can usually identify White Horse from all others, so distinctive and superior are its taste, aroma and bouquet. Blended? Of course...it is a blend of many choice whiskies, first properly aged in sherry wood for many years. These are then blended...and again aged...to allow the whisky to become properly "married". Then once more blended...and again allowed to lie "in the wood". The result is White Horse, a spirit that is soft, smooth and very pleasing to the palate, "The largest selling Scotch Whisky in the world".

George Arliss Will Be Seen In "Richelieu"

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

The matter has finally been definitely determined. George Arliss will appear in a film version of "Richelieu" upon his return from England early next fall.

It is common knowledge that Arliss long has cherished a wish to appear in this role and rumors have been frequent that he was on the verge of gratifying this professional ambition, but nothing heretofore ever has come of it. Now assurance of the fulfillment of his wish comes from Mr. Arliss himself.

Before boarding ship last week-end in New York for his annual summer vacation in his native England, Mr. Arliss stated positively that "Richelieu," based on the life of the famous cardinal, will be his next picture for Twentieth Century.

A Remarkable Record.

Mr. Arliss while in New York briefly took time out to view with pardonable pride the crowds that have been storming the doors of the Astor Theater the past six weeks to see him in his latest picture, "The House of Rothschild."

With "Disraeli," "Alexander Hamilton," "Voltaire," "Rothschild" and "Richelieu" to his credit, Mr. Arliss will have contributed rather more generously than any of his contemporary artists to the perpetuation in celluloid of the fine achievements of many of the foremost figures of history.

Such a record should lend new vigor to the expectation that Mr. Arliss will in due course be included in the royal honors and knighted for his distinguished contributions to the art of the theater.

We stand corrected in the matter of the sponsors of the forthcoming performance of Oscar Wilde's comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest," announced for this Saturday night at 8 in the auditorium of the Y. W. C. A. It is the Kahlert Kamp Kouncil of the Y. W. C. A., not Girl Scouts, that is promoting the events. Sorry.

On the incarnadined letterhead of the Cumberland Hotel, Marble Arch, London, W. 1, under date of April 15, comes to hand the following note from one of the globe-trotting editorial staff of the National Geographic Magazine, a former Kalamazooan with whom I share happy memories of pleasant scenes familiar to us both:

"Dear Mr. Bell: It's nearly lilac time in Kew, and riders are swinging their horses near Hyde Park Corner, with daffodils not far away. In spite of Scotland's defeat yesterday, there are still a few tam-o'-shanters in the London streets, though the brew lads from beyond the border aren't hanging as far out of the buses as they did on their way to Wembley yesterday. In short, duty calls me forth into London town and behind the pelicans of St. James Park the gray towers of Westminster rise into the April haze.

"But I am taking the chance that this clipping by Agate will catch your eye as it might not amid the clutter of exchanges, and I feel sure that the picture of Charlotte Greenwood playing the part of the Tower Bridge must amuse you, who have doubtless known Lady Long Legs since she first put foot to piano. Sincerely yours, (Signed) MAYNARD OWEN WILLIAMS."

The enclosure to which Mr. Williams refers to a column-long review by James Agate of "Three Sisters" which it would appear, is a musical play by Oscar Hammerstein 3d and Jerome Kern, currently charming London audiences with its music and embroidery and boring it with its book.

With regard to Mr. Hammerstein's contribution to the evening's pleasure, Mr. Agate has this to say "Nobody else has so firm and assured a drive in the matter of witlessness."

Again, in referring to Mr. Kern's part in the joint undertaking, this: "There are some charming numbers by the chorus, and both Mr. Kern's music and Mrs. Calthrop's settings are exquisite. Probably there is no country in the world in which visual and aural embroidery of such delicacy is tacked on to calico so coarse."

This is his reference to the elongated and droll Miss Greenwood: "We have to hark back to the films to appreciate how much ecstacy and riot there can be in Miss Greenwood. Fortunately she is allowed one of those dances in which ner high, effortless kicking resembles the raising of the Tower Bridge."

A perfect description.

A reminder may not be amiss that it is tonight and tomorrow night that the Cue and Curtain Club of the George Washington University present R. C. Sherriff's play of "Journey's End," in Wardman Park Theater at 8:30. Leonard Stevens, Walter Pick and Harold Stepler appear in the principal roles. "Journey's End" bears the reputation of having been the best play to come out of the Great War.

Oh, Mr. Capone!

Hot on the heels of the Hollywood report that Mae West has abandoned her plans for a personal appearance tour at the behest of the district attorney's office in Los Angeles comes news from the Paramount studios that as a result of new underworld threats the blonde star is shopping for a bullet-proof town car.

Miss West has been motor car shopping for the past week, but her request for a bullet-proof conveyance was not revealed until a salesman presented himself on the sound stage where she was working in "It Ain't No Sin" with plans for such a speedster.

Mae learned about motors from him! Learned, in fact, that it will cost her $4,500 extra to have a car body designed to be puncture-proof against .45-caliber pistol bullets, and $7,000 extra to shield her against machine-gun slugs.

Under Constant Guard.

The body will be built, according to present plans, of steel and shatter-proof glass. The windows of the car will be more than an inch thick.

Mae's interest in such a car has resulted from repeated threats received via mail and telephone from unidentified gangsters. The threats came as an aftermath of a recent Los Angeles trial in which one of three bandits was sentenced to prison for robbing the star of $17,000 in cash and jewels. She is under constant guard by a detail from the district attorney's office to prevent bodily harm and the carrying out of the threat of disfigurement by acid thrown in her face.

Just one continual round of pleasure, this being a screen star!

It is observable that no less than 15 minutes has been lopped off the playing time of "Jig Saw," the new Theater Guild comedy by Dawn Powell, being seen for the first time on any stage at the National, since its premiere on Monday night. This quick action on the part of the guild executives in attendance on the new play is in consonance with the prediction made in this space on Tuesday morning. "Jig Saw" is an extremely amusing study in how both halves live on Central Park South in New York. It is probably easier to see it here, now, than it will be later on Broadway—Broadway, in theater parlance meaning anywhere within a mile of that gaudy thoroughfare in any direction!

Sam Jaffe, who created the role of Kringelein in the original stage version of "Grand Hotel"—the part played by Lionel Barrymore on the screen—has been signed by Samuel Goldwyn for a feature role in "Barbary Coast."

In this production Gloria Swanson will be costarred with Gary Cooper, under the direction of William Wellman. Dwight Taylor and Leonard Praskins are writing the screen play based on Herbert Asbury's best seller of the same name.

Jaffe, by the way, recently finished playing the Czar Peter opposite Marlene Dietrich in Josef von Sternbergs production of "The Scarlet Empress." This is the same story, virtually, that was recently presented under the title of "Catherine, the Great," with Elizabeth Bergner in the name part and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., in the Jaffe role.

"S O S."

When this column was called upon to introduce itself over the air through WJSV yesterday morning at 11:15, on that new Post period, it got quite a kick out of a situation it has been called upon to face before.

It certainly would have been embarrassing, though, if we had not been able to remember the name of the guy who was going to speak! The other member of our household still thinks it wasn't us, since it wasn't Larry Elliott who said so.

That's the trouble with those crystal sets!

Favorites in Incoming Films

That incorrigible prankster, Lee Tracy, at left above, returns to the local screen in "I'll Tell the World," a newspaper yarn that will occupy the screen at the Rialto for the week beginning today. At right is shown John Boles in a coy pose, characteristic of an early sequence in "Bottoms Up," the screen attraction at Loew's Fox, beginning tomorrow.

Stock Opening And Ulric Play Hover in Offing

New Week Also Brings Five New Films to Local Picture Houses.

With the tenth annual season of the National Theater Players no farther away than next Monday night, Miss Lenore Ulrich occupying the Belasco stage in a revival of "The Pagan Lady" the same evening, and five new screen plays and two holdovers to regale the cinamaddicts, next week bids fair to be about as active as any of the year in the theater.

Chief interest, of course, will center in the formal inauguration of the spring and summer season of Mr. Stephen E. Cochran's resident company. While many familiar faces will be visible among the personnel of the cast when the curtain goes up on "The Pursuit of Happiness," a new leading woman, new leading man and new, but not unknown, ingenue will add a little more zest than usual to the occasion. Ruth Abbott, Roy Roberts and Mary Loane are the newcomers. Among the old-timers will be Kathryn Givney, Mrs. Hibbard, Burke Clarke Romaine Callendar, Raymond Bramley and numerous others.

"The Pursuit of Happiness," a play of the Colonial days of 1777, built about the quaint old practice of bundling, is still a lively current hit on Broadway. It was written by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Langner, under the convenient pen names of Alan Child and Isabelle Loudon. It is a comedy of many hilarious lines and situations. Furthermore, it is said that there is authentic historical basis for the boldness of the play. There will be the customary matinees.

Lenore Ulric's performance of the stellar role in "Pagan Lady" is familiar to Washingtonians whose memory of the theater reaches as far back as two or three seasons ago. The story concerns the adventures that befell a group of sharply contrasted characters residing temporarily in a little hotel on the east coast of Florida. Half of the residents are attached to the entourage of a prosperous bootlegger and his mistress; the other half to a missionary convention. The conflict arises from the situation in which the Rev. Todd and his nephew find themselves through the machinations of a seductive young siren of the sands. Supporting the star will be seen Gerald Kent, Charlotte Andrews, John F. Morrison, Richard S. Bishop, Robert Lowes, Oswald Yorke and Arthur Mack.

For the new week at the Gayety, Manager Jimmy Lake announces the "Topsy Turvey Girls," featuring Lillian Harrison, Claire Stone and Dorothy Ahearn, described as the three most beautiful girls in burlesque, on the distaff side, and Frank X. Silk and Lou Costello in the comedy assignments. Amateur night will be observed on Friday with no extra charge.

Final preparations are being made by Manager Leonard B. Schloss for the opening of Glen Echo Park for the 1934 summer season on Saturday, May 5. All of the regular attractions have been put in tip-top shape and new novelties and innovations, of course, have been added to keep the park in the forefront of resorts of its type. Announcement of the date on which the Crystal Pool will be open to the public will be made in due course. For dancing in the Spanish ballroom, a Dave Williams orchestra of 15 pieces under the direction of Phil O'Brien will play nightly.

"Twenty Million Sweethearts," a film play dealing with the career of a popular radio star, opens as the foremost screen attraction at the Earle tomorrow, with Dick Powell and Ginger Rogers heading the cast, which also includes Ted Fio Rita and his orchestra and the Four Mills Brothers. Pat O'Brien appears in the leading comedy role. On the stage the living vaudeville bill will be headlined by Ramona and Jack Fulton. Other acts to be introduced by Audrey Sieber, M. C., include Freddie Craig, jr., Lewis and Van, dancers, and Goss and Barrows.

"Pat" Patterson, the film's newest singing comedienne; John Boles, Spencer Tracy, Sid Silvers, Herbert Mundin, Harry Green and Thelma Todd are the principals in "Bottoms Up," the new film musical opening at Loew's Fox tomorrow. On the stage will be presented a condensed version of "Fifty Million Frenchmen," with Venita Gould, Al Norman, Richard Lane, Esther Lloyd, Susan Jane, Phil White, Annette Hoffmann and Eddie Michaels foremost among the entertainers. The bill will be completed by the Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's orchestra contributions.

"I'll Tell the World," opening the new week at the Rialto Theater today, brings Lee Tracy back to the screen in the stellar role of a newspaper story that is said to afford him one of the grandest opportunities of his career before the cameras. The newspaper atmosphere is nothing new to Mr. Tracy, since he created the role of Hildy Johnson in the stage version of "The Front Page." Gloria Stuart, Roger Pryor and Onslow Stevens lead the supporting cast, which also includes Dorothy Grainger and Willard Robertson. Short subjects and the Universal News complete the bill.

Ida Lupino, a youthful blonde from the other side, and Richard Arlen are the featured members of the cast of "Come On, Marines," chief screen feature for the week opening tomorrow at the Metropolitan Theater. The story is said to be an exciting one with a strong romantic twist.

* * * *

"This Man Is Mine," a screen version of the stage play, "Love Flies in the Window," brings Irene Dunne to the screen at RKO-Keith's for the week beginning tomorow. Miss Dunne is supported in this drama of a resourceful wife by Ralph Bellamy, Constance Cummings, Sidney Blackmer, Kay Johnson, Charles Starrett, Louis Mason and Vivian Tobin. The secondary feature of the bill will be "This is America," a pictorial recital of people and events in this country during the past 20 years.

Veteran of Spanish War, 86, Gets Two Years for Robbery

Baltimore, April 26 (Spl.).—A veteran of the Spanish-American War, who was too old to enlist in 1898, but got into the Army by saying he was 10 years younger than he was, was sentenced to prison here today on a charge of stealing jewels.

He is Jacob Svoboda, and he told the court he is 84 years old. But the date of his birth as given to police indicates he really is 86.

White-headed and white-bearded, supporting himself with a gnarled cane, the old man heard Judge Robert F. Stanton in criminal court sentence him to the Maryland House of Correction for two years. Svoboda had been found guilty of stealing three rings, valued at $1,150, from a Baltimore diamond merchant.

The case was docketed here when the plaintiff asked for a change of venue, claiming she could not obtain a fair trial in Washington County.

Sherley was fatally shot while seated in the lobby of his hotel here three weeks ago. Krout and Sherley differed over rent for space in which Krout's restaurant was located.

Taylor in Race For U. S. Senate

Fayetteville, W. Va., Editor Seeks Democratic Nomination.

Fayetteville, W. Va., April 26 (Spl.).—J. Alfred Taylor, local newspaper editor, today announced he would seek the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

Taylor, former Speaker of the House of Delegates, party nominee for Governor in 1928 and former Representative, is in Moundsville to address a district meeting of chapters of the Order of the Eastern Star, of which he is State worthy grand patron.

Walter Sugden, Sisterville attorney, announced he would not become a candidate for the Republican nomination for Fourth District representative because of private business. Party leaders had urged him, he said, to seek the seat held by Representative George W. Johnson (Democrat), of Parkersburg.

A. J. Wilkinson, of Huntington, former member of the State House of Delegates, today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination of the State Senate from the Fifth District. J. Patrick Beacom, member of the House from Cabell County, previously had announced his candidacy for the same seat.

Wilkinson, a bitter foe of utility policies in West Virginia, was defeated for the Democratic nomination for Governor in 1932.

U. S. Civil War Bill Unpaid

Senate Approves Baltimore Claim for $171,034.31 Spent in Building Emergency Forts to Repel Confederates; House Action Needed.

Baltimore, April 26 (Spl.).—Baltimore's claim on the Federal Government for payment of a bill more than 70 years old, for mony expended in construction of Civil War fortifications, has been approved by the United States Senate.

The amount involved is $171,034.31. City officials here say that the money was virtually a loan to the United States. During the war between the States, Confederate cavalry penetrated above the Potomac, and it was feared Baltimore might be cut off from Washington. To prevent this, emergency fortifications were necessary, and Baltimore City built them upon assurance of Federal Army commanders that the Government would repay the money.

After the war, Baltimore joined with other cities in asking payment for such fortifications. The claims of various other cities were paid, but not Baltimore's.

The debt was forgotten here, but in recent years it came to the attention of city officials and renewed demands were made in Congress that the money be appropriated for payment. Bills to that effect have been approved several times by the Senate, but the House has always refused to consider them.

Now, with the Senate approval of today, it is felt the House may give favorable consideration to the proposal. Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy is seeking to have the War Claims Committee of the House approve a bill to settle this debt.

Physicist Believes Zinc Sulphide Key To Italian Miracle

Baltimore, April 26 (Spl.).—Dr. Robert W. Wood, head of the physics department at Johns Hopkins University, doesn't take much stock in the stories about the mysterious blue light which is reported to emanate from the breast of a woman at Trieste, Italy. He blames zinc sulphide for the reputed "miracle."

"The action of light on zinc sulphide produces a chemical reaction which invisibly changes it to an unstable compound," he said. "Then, in the darkness, the process is reversed and in returning to a stable state, the zinc sulphide throws off blue light."

To demonstrate, Dr. Wood saturated his hands with a solution of zinc sulphide and held them before a powerful electric light bulb. Then he ordered the light switched off, and in the darkness phosphorescent gleams could be seen emanating from the physicist's hands.

Va. Composers' Program Opens State Festival

Third Annual Music Fete Draws Many Lovers to Charlottesville.

By Lee Hawkins.

Charlottesville, Va., April 26.—The growth of music in the State was evidenced here tonight in the Virginia composers' program, opening event of the third annual State Choral Festival in Cabell Hall at the university.

The compositions of eleven native Virginians featured.

Folk singers, musicians and dancers are on the program for tomorrow afternoon in the McIntire amphitheater, at the university, when traditional tunes will be offered. The participants will come from Albemarle, Smyth, Washington, Nelson, Patrick, Augusta and Campbell Counties.

Tomorrow night, in Cabell Hall, the nine Old Harp Singers of Nashville, Tenn., will give arrangements of folk tunes as preserved in the mountains and Southern backwoods for generations through ear alone. Dr. George P. Jackson, of Vanderbilt University, founder and manager of the Singers, will direct the program.

Saturday at 2:45 p. m. a chorus of 1,000 voices will sing Brahm's Requiem, to the accompaniment of the National Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Hans Kindler.

Singers from choirs, glee clubs and musical organizations all over the State will form a great chorus to be directed by Dr. T. Tertius Noble, of New York City. A final practice with the orchestra will be held Saturday morning.

Dr. Kindler will direct the orchestra in a closing concert Saturday night in Memorial Gymnasium at the university.

Choral and ensemble numbers, instrumental and vocal solos, featured tonight's concert, marking the opening of the three-day drama of music and song.

The Charlottesville Municipal Band played two marches and a serenade, under direction of Harry Lowe.

A dozen girls from the King-Smith Studio School, of Washington, "Les Fauvettes," assisted by a string quartet from the University of Virgini, presented an English-American folk song.

"Far O'er the Sea," by Roy Nichols, Norfolk composer, was sung admirably by Marion Whitehurst Rawles, contralto, with James Constantine, of the university, at the piano.

Mrs. Herbert Ragland, of Richmond, sang several folk songs.

Maryland Pair Jailed in West

Couple Sought in Holdup of Realty Man Caught in Nebraska.

Annapolis, Md., April 26 (Spl.).—Arrest of a Maryland man and his wife in Columbus, Nebr., on charges of attacking and robbing a real estate dealer of Creston Park, Anne Arundel County, last month, was reported to Sheriff R. Glenn Prout today.

The couple held are Julian ("Chop") George, originally from Easton, Md., and his wife, Mrs. Pauline George. George is accused of robbing Joseph H. Jacobs of $1,500 in bonds, checks, jewelry, and his automobile. Police at Easton said George had a criminal record there, and was banished from Talbot County.

On the night of March 24 two men broke into Jacobs' bedroom, threatened him with a pistol, bound and gagged him, leaving him helpless on his bed. Then they ransacked the house, cooked themselves a meal and drove away in Jacobs' car, which was found abandoned in Baltimore a few days later. Disappearance of George and his wife directed suspicion toward them. Detective Lieut. Charles L. Barranger, of Baltimore, was here today to confer with State's Attorney A. Theodore Brady relative to extraditing the couple.

Utility Board, Electric Firm Study Charges

Maryland Body Meets Potomac-Edison's Officials.

Baltimore, April 26 (Spl.).—Light and power rates in western and southern Maryland were discussed at a conference today between members of the Maryland Public Service Commission and officials of the Potomac-Edison Co.

The session was executive, but it was said the general subject was procedure to be followed in the commission's move to reduce rates of various plants of the power company.

A valuation of $15,682,043 was placed on the company's properties last year by the public service commission, after a 20-month investigation. The company claimed a valuation of $25,560,711.

Since rates are based on the valuation of the company's property, the disparity of $10,000,000 between the commission's figures and the company's claims would have important bearing in setting the rate. A substantial cut in Potomac-Edison territory was foreseen.

The power company did not wait for the new rates but appealed the valuation issue to the Circuit Court, halting the P. S. C.'s action, which countered by filing a demurrer claiming that the appeal could not be taken on the question of valuation alone.

When the case reached the Court of Appeals at Annapolis, the power company was sustained in its contention that it could appeal, and the case went back to Circuit Court, where it is now pending.

The Public Service Commission wishes to combine the valuation issue with the rate issue in the hearing now pending in the court, and the meeting today was to decide whether it is expedient to do this.

Ritchie's Fifth Term Ambition Flayed by Coad

Senator to Run Against Maryland Governor "if Necessary."

Baltimore, April 26 (Spl.).—Assailing the "utter selfishness" of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie in even contemplating running for a fifth term, State Senator J. Allan Coad, of St. Marys County, today asserted he had refused suggestions that he run for comptroller or for Congress on a Ritchie ticket.

He repeated his promise to run for Governor "if it becomes necessary, and I hope it won't," and he predicted that Gov. Ritchie could not be reelected if he runs for a fifth term.

Senator Coad, who has been given credit for extensive cuts in the State budget, spoke before a meeting of the Associated Democratic Clubs, Inc., here. He assailed "evils that have arisen in this State in the last 14 years"—most of the period when Ritchie has been Governor—and he attacked long continuance in office by certain politicians.

Those who drafted the State liquor law were assailed by the fiery southern Marylander, who asserted the statute was drawn "at a 36-hour party at the Lord Baltimore Hotel." He promised later to give the names of State officials and politicians who sponsored the liquor legislation, if it became necessary.

Maryland's financial situation and tax basis was bitterly denounced by the legislator, who attacked the reorganization of the State government in 1922, which, he said, boosted the cost of government in Maryland from $17,000,000 to $38,000,000.

Diplomatic Dinner.

The diplomatic dinner is the ne plus ultra of fashionable life in the Nation's Capital—according to school teachers in Boston, students in Connecticut finishing schools, and Kansas debutantes. Whenever they visit here they gaze with awe upon Embassy Row and vision themselves sitting at long tables set with fine linen and polished silver, sipping the right wine with the right fist—fish we meant—and talking with beribboned foreign ministers upon Secrets of State. Whether it is the wine or the wisdom that fascinates more, it is certain that in most minds the latter holds high place. Nowhere, it is whispered, can be heard such excellent repartee, tinged with veiled references to affairs upon which the state of nations impends.

The other night the Japanese Ambassador, and his staff, invited the Chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs of the Department of State, and his staff, to dinner at the Japanese Embassy. Here surely was setting for high converse. But, alas, what, we ask you, could be said?

Did the Chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs of the Department of State chat skillfully about treaty rights with his excellency, the Ambassador of Japan? Did the lowlier staff members discuss the Emperor of Manchukuo? Our guess is in the negative. And so, at such exciting times, when plain men talk of crises and headlines scream, Ambassadors who give dinners must be glad of the weather, ball games, movies, bridge and all the subjects with which Kansas debutantes are bored.

Mischievous Publicity.

The list of silver holders has produced no scandalous revelations, but it has clearly demonstrated the mischief-making potentialities of this kind of publicity. To those ignorant of the difference between "spot" and "futures" contracts, and bewildered by discussions as to whether a silver holder is "long" or "short" on balance, an examination of the list is worse than useless—it is definitely misleading.

The harm done by this undiscriminating publicity is shown by a letter to The Post from a member of a brokerage house listed as holding an option on a certain amount of silver and invidiously featured as one of the hosts at a dinner given to the Congressional silver bloc. The writer protests that neither he nor his firm owns an ounce of silver, but he says that they are carrying the reported holdings for account of customers. Furthermore he adds, quite reasonably, that he sees no harm in people owning silver and expresses a wish that he had placed his own money in silver instead of in certain stocks and bonds.

Publicity is an effective weapon when it is used intelligently, but it is an unadulterated nuisance when it casts undeserved suspicion upon persons going about the orderly conduct of legitimate business. In undertaking to test the sentiment of the country for any proposed legislation, Congress may find it desirable to ascertain whether interested groups have exaggerated the strength of popular demands for certain legislative proposals. Even so, the findings do not constitute a mandate to accept or to reject particular measures. Scandal-mongering publicity serves no good purpose at all. It merely distracts attention from sound, intelligent discussion of principles, arouses popular prejudices and distorts the real issues.

Divided Tax Responsibilities.

The House has accepted most of the Senate amendments to the tax bill. Even the Senate's 10 per cent horizontal increase in income tax payments is to be submitted to the lower chamber for a record vote, although it is not retained in the conference bill.

It is rather unusual to find the House so willing to tolerate Senate amendments that interfere with its jealously guarded Constitutional rights to initiate bills for raising revenue. But the legislative division of responsibility which results in a tax compromise, instead of a carefully framed revenue measure, is characteristic of our haphazard methods of financing Government needs. It is difficult to pass an intelligent judgment upon an isolated tax bill which is not an integral part of a comprehensive budgetary plan, but merely a product of legislative maneuvering.

As the total amount of emergency outlays in prospect is a matter of guesswork there is no chance of planning to assure a balanced budget at any definite future date. Moreover, the Congressional practice of approving spending projects without making provision for financing their execution gives rise to fears that new taxes, when voted, may be made an excuse for authorizing further outlays. Certainly, there is no assurance that receipts will be devoted to covering expenditures to which we are now committed.

The United States ought to have a comprehensive executive budget, carrying reasonably accurate estimates of income and outgo, with definite proposals for financing all requirements. Whenever Congress decided not to be bound by this budgetary plan, it should acknowledge a responsibility for providing special revenues to cover additional extra-budgetary appropriations. So long as we follow our present uncoordinated fiscal methods, tax legislation will continue to be a product of political bargaining instead of an integral part of a thoughtful financial plan.

How To Answer Japan.

There are at least two methods by which the international treaty obligations threatened by Japan's attitude of overlordship toward China can be constructively reaffirmed. Unlike military preparations, neither of these methods would involve any direct show of hostility to Japan. Both would help to draw the attention of the Tokyo government to a clearer sense of the larger issues involved in its recent manifesto.

The first procedure indicated is a responsibility of the League of Nations, though it is one which would be immensely strengthened by backing from the United States. Already on the agenda of the council session which meets at Geneva on May 14, is an item concerning the league's reconstruction program in China. That program is one of the concrete developments against which the new Japanese policy is directed. It should be reaffirmed and expanded by action of the powers represented on the League Council.

This step should be taken not merely because the technical assistance afforded China by the league during the past five years has been helpful in unifying and stabilizing that chaotic country. Reaffirmation of the program of technical assistance is also desirable because Japan, as a member of the League Council, in May, 1931, gave formal approval to that program. It is true that Mr. Yoshizawa, the Japanese delegate, then recorded that Japan's approval was for cooperation "of a purely technical character" only, and that Tokyo now claims that political activities have been exercised in China by League agents. But what Japan now asks is not investigation of this charge as much as discontinuation of all League work for Chinese reconstruction.

Before this demand is actually made it can and should be repudiated by action of the League Council. The United States has looked favorably on the principle of international technical assistance to China, realizing that this is far preferable to expanding the sphere of influence of any single power. The Chinese Minister to Switzerland has this week urged the League to continue this assistance. Japan is committed in its behalf. So there is no good reason why this step should not be taken, with the full approbation of our Government.

The second procedure is one which concerns the League of Nations less and the United States more. On January 7, 1932, in identical notes to the governments of China and Japan, Secretary Stimson laid down the famous policy of nonrecognition of any situation resulting from treaty violation. On March 11, 1932, in the Assembly resolution which led to Japan's resignation from the League of Nations, the Stimson doctrine was proclaimed as being also the policy of the League. Since that date the lines have held. Neither the United States nor any League member has recognized "Manchukuo" as an independent state.

It is now freely conjectured that one reason for the recent Japanese manifesto is to break this policy of nonrecognition. The theory is that Japan demands more than she really wants expecting that in an eventual compromise the separation of Manchuria from China would be given sanction by the world. Whether or not this is a true interpretation, it is evident that the nonrecognition doctrine must not be abandoned under pressure. And the clearest way to show that it is not being abandoned under pressure would be for this country, as its sponsor, to reaffirm the principle of nonrecognition, to which the present Administration has tacitly adhered.

Both of these procedures have the advantage of being thoroughly logical, of being indicated by past policy, and of being steps which can be taken without political entanglement. They fall clearly in that category of positive international action which, as we said last Sunday, "is essential in order to call Japan's attention to the fact that the words and spirit of her manifesto menace the whole structure of treaty sanctity, on which mutual respect and friendship between nations depends."

An Organized Industry.

The chairman of the National Silk Code Authority announces that the industry intends to ask permission to close all mills for a week beginning May 7. The effect of code organization upon this highly competitive industry is thus strikingly demonstrated.

Formerly, with unsold stocks accumulating, and sales declining sharply, many mills would already have dismissed employes or suspended operations, instead of spreading work, as the mills have done, and then asking for a general stoppage. The amount of lost time might not have been any greater under the old system but some mills and their employes would have been much more seriously affected than others.

Better organization provides no remedy for unemployment due to a lack of profitable demand for produced goods. But it may lead to more intelligent handling of the unemployment problems created by declining business.

Talking For Effect.

Under the compromise agreement between railway labor and management, the roads have agreed to restore a quarter of the 10 per cent cut in basic rates on July 1, another quarter next January and the remainder on April 1, 1935. "We have joined in this agreement," said A. F. Whitney, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' Association, "in the interest of National recovery. The agreement runs for one year and to this extent will stabilize wages on American roads and give all concerned a breathing spell."

This mild and reasonable statement is in sharp contrast to Mr. Whitney's earlier impatient rejection of the argument that the roads needed a "breathing spell" before undertaking to restore the 10 per cent cut in full. If the extravagant claims which he then made were true, there would be no reason for compromising the issue. As it is the position of the railroads has been seriously misrepresented by Mr. Whitney's statement that Class I roads which reported a small deficit in 1933 actually enjoyed a profit on operations of $474,000,000. The deficit was converted into an imaginary surplus by disregarding the obligation to pay interest on the bonded debt.

This disposition on the part of the chief spokesman for railway labor to ignore the claims of bondholders indicates a serious lack of understanding of the problems that confront the roads. Mr. Whitney for instance seems to forget that the railroad industry as a whole is not over-capitalized. The capital investment is actually considerably in excess of the amount of outstanding issues—stocks and bonds. Not all railroads are overbonded, moreover, although many of them are. As the Brookings Institute has pointed out in its volume on "The American Transportation Problem," the real weakness lies "in the rigidity of the whole structure of rates, wages and charges in the face of changing business conditions." If all bonded debt were to be transformed into stock issues, roads could go through a period of no profits or inadequate profits from operation without being forced to default. But the problem of finding new capital for carrying on their operations would still exist. If they could not earn enough to make people willing to buy their stock issues, private ownership and control would become impossible.

Profits on invested capital must, therefore, suffice to attract capital unless the Government intends to subsidize nonprofit enterprises. From the point of view of labor's return it does not greatly matter whether operating profits are distributed as dividends or as interest on bonded debt. The important fact to keep in mind is that the railroads are currently and on the average not earning a fair rate of return on their invested capital. In such a situation it would be unfair if railroad labor were alone expected to bear the brunt of economy efforts. But it would be at least equally unfair to assume that any return on the investment which gives employment is a "dole to idle capital," exacted at the employe's expense.

Cause For Pride?

Speaker Rainey and Representative Byrns defend their leadership of the House by emphasizing that 22 Administration measures have been passed without amendment from the floor. The Speaker's advertisement of this record will seem surprising to those citizens who have always regarded both houses of Congress as deliberative bodies. Certainly it is a strongly evolutionary doctrine that legislative virtue is proved by willingness to accept unquestioningly the proposals transmitted from the executive branch of Government.

Mr. Rainey may feel a certain pride in his record for rushing important measures to a vote with the aid of the "gag" rule, before hapless legislators had discovered what they were voting for, but his complacency should be tempered with misgivings. The country, if not the Speaker, is having ample reason to repent the legislative impulsiveness which the majority leaders acclaim.

Only on the theory that the House can not be trusted to engage in debate can the Speaker legitimately defend a record of legislative subserviency mortifying to those who believe in representative government as an indispensable safeguard against autocratic rule.

After an auto salesman told us the trade-in allowance on our '29 bus we've been parking it on the lee side of the street to keep the wind from blowing it to pieces.

A Paradox.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "United States and Canada unite in war on grasshoppers," says a press dispatch, telling how eight Middle Western States and three Canadian Provinces have united in laying plans for the most intensive fight against the grasshopper plague ever undertaken. Reports from various points throughout these areas indicate that the number of hoppers will this year be very great, and threaten to destroy many millions of dollars' worth of crops. So many thousands of dollars will be spent in trying to kill off these destructive insects.

In the name of the Prophet Tugwell, figs! Here is our paternal National Government spending $500,000,000 of the poor taxpayers' money in bounties to the United States farmers to cut down their production of wheat and other farm products. And the Canadian government sends delegates to Rome to negotiate an international agreement reducing the production of wheat. What's wrong with these two pictures? One, spending public funds to kill grasshoppers because they cut down production! The other spending vast amounts wrung from the impoverished taxpayers to reduce crop production! Have our alleged statesmen no sense of humor?

China's Use of Silver.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is noted that, in an excerpt from The Economist (London) published in your columns on April 20, the assertion is made that "internal prices would rise" in China as a result of a rise in the world price of silver.

This is wholly inconsistent with facts and with the rest of the article, which states that "unless China gave up the silver standard she would experience all the hardships of deflation," i. e., falling internal prices.

China has no system for the use of "confidence" money (bank loans) to confuse the coincidental use of a metallic standard, as is the case with the Occidental "gold" standard. It is impossible to use a truly metallic money in modern commerce, as China uses silver. Hence the price of gold becomes a political fiction; and the issuance of credit, as by our Federal Reserve System, on a basis of private profit in commercial bank "loans" on which interest is paid in order to simulate real loans, becomes a system of legalized counterfeiting, while the gold standard is seen as a confidence game for selling the gold brick of private control of credit money to a gullible public.

Optimism!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From the information I have collected from the White House and Senate, I think the Vets' bonus will be paid in full pretty soon. For this reason and because the entire Nation stands by our great President Roosevelt, there will be no bonus march on Washington this year. Also, if the President keeps up his good work, he will be reelected for 20 years more. JOHN ALFERI.

Disrespect to the Aged.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I deplore the fact that so little consideration seems shown old people today. When I was a small girl I was taught the aged should be looked after and treated with courtesy by the young and vigorous individual. Today old people are often "put on the shelf" by the younger generation, their opinions are openly ridiculed, they are termed "old foggies" and their old-fashioned manners are derided.

Generally old people are either neglected or else are treated with ill-concealed flippancy by their younger associates. Often the old person is spoken of as the "old man" and familiarly slapped on the back by some youth who evidently does not realize some people dislike and resent familiarity and especially feel it an affront when given by some one half their age. Foreigners notice the gross lack of respect shown often by the young toward the old in this country. When my grandfather came here he said the first thing he noticed was the discourtesy and lack of respect exhibited by the youth toward elderly people in America.

Likes Monday Night Programs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although not given to writing fan letters, I am nevertheless compelled, through civic pride perhaps, to let you know how much I enjoy your Monday night programs.

For one thing they have improved greatly since their poor beginning. The skits are longer, which makes them more interesting, since it gives time to get the idea of what it is all about. And the characters are improving. The baseball episode, given on the April 16 program was a pip—and the rabid and loyal Washington fan who traveled to Boston to see the "Big Train" triumph over the Beaneaters made a hit with me, my family and every one with whom I talked. Keep up the programs and their quality.

Drastic Action Necessary.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every day the arch criminal Dillinger and his gang continue to defy authorities they increase crime and encourage criminals, and more brave men run the risk of being killed. Laws in Congress recently passed, or proposed, to combat crime do not seem to go to the root of the great evil afflicting the Nation. People who supply criminals with firearms, machine guns, &c., must be considered as guilty as the evildoers themselves. The time is at hand when the Federal Government must take the most drastic action, and that is: Take complete control of the manufacture and handling of all firearms and ammunition, as well as the importation and exportation of the same. All dangerous weapons, including bullet-proof vests, should be confiscated if possessed by anyone outside of legal authorities.

Pipe Smokers.

Since the days when Queen Elizabeth used to enjoy her pipe of tobacco with Sir Walter Raleigh, the custom of pipe smoking by women has had its ups and downs, until now it's at almost an all-time low. The cigarette is preeminent.

When Mrs. Belle Rhynes, of Savannah, Ga., died the other day, the fact that she smoked a pipe received almost equal attention in her obituaries with her remarkable age. She was 123. She attributed her longevity, indeed, to her pipe smoking as well as to her placid disposition.

But customs change about. During her lifetime, Mrs. Rhynes might have pointed to two wives of Presidents who smoked their pipes—Mrs. Andrew Jackson and Mrs. Zachary Taylor. Mme. Vigee Le Brun, the French portraitist, smoked and painted her own picture, pipe in hand. Even the strait-laced Quakeresses of Pennsylvania two centuries ago smoked pipes and were not criticized. And the world is not likely to forget soon those energetic cigar smokers, George Sand and Amy Lowell.

Man and Ape.

So many of our easy references to man's relationship to and descendency from the "monkey tribe" are made in jest that not everyone knows just what the scientific support of the theory actually amounts to.

One popular notion is that, not very long before the race that is now mankind began acquiring "human" characteristics, it was one and the same with the primates that have developed into the great apes. The scientist would say this separation took place only five million years ago, and that the common ancestor of man and the apes had already attained relatively their modern stature.

The other notion, more commonly recognized by scientists in the past, is that the separation occurred some 50 million years ago, when our contemporary mammals were still in the low-order stage. In other words, that two distinct types of primates began developing from some small animal such as the lemur or tarsius of today, and that they developed along parallel lines except that man's branch outstripped the others.

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, of the Smithsonian Institution, has been studying the bones and organs of man and ape, and claims logical, scientific evidence that these two theories mark extremes, midway between which the truth lies. The similarities between man and ape are too great, says Dr. Hrdlicka, to have appeared independently during their development from a suborder. And yet they are not great enough to warrant the opinion that man had just barely left the common ancestor when he began to acquire human intelligence.

Dr. Hrdlicka says that 25 million years ago, it is now a fair guess, humans and simians were at least first cousins. This statement of an inconceivable period may not mean much to the layman, but it does to the scientist, because it hints at a definite stage in the anthropological chart.

The whole dispute, of course, if there is a dispute, involves merely the question of how far back in antiquity the separation took place. But that suggests the most interesting point—that science no longer questions the common ancestry of anthropoids and man, but only the period in mammal development at which the two types diverged on independent paths.

Nevertheless, 25 million years is a long time, and if in all this period we still retain distinct physical characteristics in common with the simians, it is not surprising that our intelligence and reason as a race should still be a bit imperfect. As some scientist has said, we still have 120 million years to outgrow our bad habits before the sun ceases to warm us.

The Post Impressionist

Crime And Love.

Postoffice, Friday.

THE lovely voice of Mrs. August Belmont charmed all the theater-goers of this country when she was Eleanor Robson. Today she is president of the Motion Picture Research Council and criticizes the motion picture. We are certain that, if we heard her do it, we should be almost persuaded to complete agreement, despite our preconceived convictions. But we have only read her statement in cold print and, in part, we disagree.

From the text of the interview wherein she issues her entirely thoughtful rebuke, we do not gather that she makes complaint against the dramatic qualities of the screen. Her objection is moral. She believes that the cinema's stories are all too much of too few sorts.

"A study of the content of the films"—Mrs. Belmont is thus quoted—"revealed that seven out of every ten pictures are concerned with 'crime' or 'love' as interpreted by the movies. It is obvious that this is not a balanced diet for children. There is need for broadening in the field of subject matter, so as to give more attention to different kinds of stories, and to make the movie a dependable interpreter of life in its many varied aspects."

* * *

Mrs. Belmont has recently assumed the active presidency of the Council. In that office she succeeds Dr. Abbott Lawrence Lowell, who was also lately and long president of Harvard. He refused the place of Government representative on the Motion Picture Code Authority, but remains as honorary president of the M. P. R. C. and is understood to share Mrs. Belmont's views.

These are weighty authorities.

And yet—aren't they a little extreme and a trifle hard on both the hard-driven scenario-writer and the equally hard-driven motion-picture producer?

The interview declares: "Mrs. Belmont said that, at the end of thirty days after studying a book, children remember only 30 per cent of what they could recall next morning, but that three months after seeing a film they remember from 90 to 100 per cent of what they could recall next day."

We believe it. But why should the sins of the children be visited upon the fathers, not to mention the mothers? Few parents read at all. If all go to the movies, few remember what they see there. They've been diverted. That is what they pay their movie-money for. Presumably they are more diverted by stories of love and crime than they would be by other sorts of stories—if other sorts could be written. And the pursuit of life, liberty and diversion is the adult American's citizen's inalienable right.

To us it seems that the basic issue is not the character of the theme, so much as the way in which that theme is handled. In evidence we would present a picture recently shown in Washington under the misleading title of "Esquimaux Wife-Traders." It is one of the most artistic and thought-provoking films we ever have seen. It is probably far too good to be commercially successful. But crime and love are of the essence of its composition.

Besides which, the screen is not unique in its preference for themes of crime and love. If you run your eye over the "legitimate" theater's present offerings in New York, you will find that of these, not seven out of ten, but a hundred per cent touch upon those two terrible themes.

And how about fiction? Washington's best sellers are best sellers everywhere. But what have they lately been? Well, among others, Thorne Smith's crime-thriller, "Skin and Bones," and, of course, Hervey Allen's endless "Anthony Adverse," an habitual offender on both Mrs. Belmont's counts.

If you come to that, does the Motion Picture Research Council intend to let Walt Disney's three small porkers run wild any longer? Their story is nothing except the story of The Crime of the Big Bad Wolf.

The argumentum ad hominem may not always be fair, but it is always tempting. When she was on the stage, Mrs. Belmont was also one of our entirely delightful actresses. She gained her first success in "Arizona" and, as Bonita, helped to make its love-story popular from New York to San Francisco. She won more hearts than a stage-lover's in "Merely Mary Ann," "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" and "Salomy Jane." She headed an all-star cast in Goldsmith's notorious love-comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer."

Not long ago, we attended an international conference that debated these alleged screen-tendencies about which the M. P. R. C. makes so much pother. The delegates came from nearly every civilized country. They were educators, psychologists, social-workers, physicians. They were everybody except the people who make motion-pictures and the people who go to see motion-pictures. Most of the delegates said they "didn't attend the cinema," but they wanted to do to it just about what the M. P. R. C. seems to want to do.

Toward the end of the conference, when everybody was pretty well worn by crusading, we had a talk with the most important conferee. We asked:

"If you folk could go as far as you pleased with the screen, how far would you go with it?

"That's easy!" she laughed. "We'd make it so dull that every member of every family could go to see every picture—and then I suppose no member of any family would go to see any picture!"

The speaker wasn't Mrs. Belmont. But we forgive Mrs. Belmont even if she agrees with the speaker. We forgive Mrs. Belmont because we remember "Merely Mary Ann."

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

A LOT of editors seem to be getting comfort from the recent change of tone on the part of Administration speakers. Mr. Roosevelt's impromptu remarks the other day, Secretary Hull's address in New York, that of Secretary Wallace out West and here in the Nation's Capital, the remarks of the professor himself, Mr. Tugwell, before the editors—all of them were lacking in belligerency and soothing to hear. There was more of a cooing persuasiveness about them and undoubtedly they were all intended to be reassuring.

I hope, though, that no one will take them as meaning a change of heart on the part of the Administration. They mean, instead, in my opinion, a change of tactics. The New Deal has run up against some pretty stiff opposition of late. There is discernible now a new approach, a new method of salesmanship, but no change in practices insofar as I can see. From belligerency the New Deal is turning to subtleties.

* * * *

Only Wednesday, Crack-Down Johnson dismissed BARGERON, concrete facts of how the NRA is crushing small business with the gay statement that early in his Administration Mr. Roosevelt had said that no business had a right to survive that could not pay its employes a living wage. This means, of course, what the NRA prescribes as a living wage, notwithstanding that thousands of unemployed would be very glad, indeed, to go on an unprescribed pay roll.

Crack-Down's attitude indicates, however, that he hasn't changed at all, soft words on the part of the Administration to the contrary.

I think the one definite place to look to determine whether there is to be any change is the securities act. The President has been represented as favoring some modification, assurances of some modification on Capitol Hill have been given.

However, nobody has said as yet just what the modifications were to be and I have seen no signs of any move toward modifications yet.

* * * *

When you consider the securities act in connection with the expanding plans for subsistence homesteads and the Government taking over abandoned and unprofitable plants and factories for operation by the Government, the revolution or whatever one wants to call it, takes tangible form.

For example, it is hard to understand how any complaint can be made against the subsistence homesteads or the Government-operated factory proposition as long as they are necessary to give unemployment to men that private industry cannot absorb. Call it a break with our traditions or anything you like, if private industry cannot absorb the unemployment, men have got to be put to work somewhere in some way.

But, it puts the matter in an entirely different light when the Government does something to prevent the absorption by private industry. There may be some difference of opinion as to whether the securities act is doing this just now but there is no doubt that it will presently and in increasing volume as recovery progresses.

And from some of the things I have heard about the underlying purposes of the act, I am not satisfied that this is not exactly what it is intended to be.

* * * *

By this I mean to say my understanding of one of the Brain Trust's concealed purposes of this bill is to bring about what is described as a "pulverization of industry," to make it, in toher words, virtually impossible for big industry to continue to float the securities necessary to its existence.

If industry as we have known it is thus checked there is little doubt that there will be an increasing need for subsistence homesteads, Government operation of plants and the like and maybe, sometime, that Government-operated Utopia of which the Brain Trust dreams.

What is finally done to the securities act then may throw considerable light on the question of whither we are going. The only argument against this line of thought is that it is most difficult to believe there is any such thing as coordination going on anywhere in the present Government.

Federal Relief Cost 1 1-3 Billio For 11 Months

Hopkins' Books Reveal $500,000,000 Left; 18 Million on Rolls.

Books of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration yesterday revealed the Government has spent $1,350,000,000 to tide the needy over during the last 11 months.

On the credit side of the books, Harry Hopkins, relief director, has approximately $500,000,000 left to spend. Statisticians yesterday, however, estimated this fund would last only five months should expenditures continue at the present rate.

Federal expenditures for relief since the start of the Roosevelt Administration have been on an average of $5,362,000 daily, the books show. The spending began slowly, but as additional loads were shouldered by the Federal Government, it was accelerated until it reached a peak of around $60,000,000 weekly, when the Civil Works Administration was in full swing. This is almost equal to 50 cents for every man, woman and child in the country.

The first of the New Deal relief appropriations was $500,000,000 granted by Congress May 12, 1933. This sum stretched until February 15, when the second Congressional appropriation of $950,000,000 was authorized.

Prior to this the relief treasury was bolstered by $400,000,000 from the Public Works Administration to carry out the civil works program. To this the relief administration added $100,000,000.

During the closing-out period of the CWA, between February 15 and April 1, the Government paid out $350,000,000, according to Mr. Hopkins. Under costs of starting the present emergency work program which replaced the CWA, direct relief grants jumped from $51,441,983 in March to an anticipated total of more than $100,000,000 in April. So far this month, $93,181,835 has been spent.

Meanwhile, Mr. Hopkins now estimates that 4,700,000 families are on relief rolls—about 18,800,000 persons.

At the rate of present spending, the relief funds will be drained long before Congress meets again. Hopkins has declined to discuss asking for additional appropriations, but it is a common expectation that goodly sums for relief will of necessity be included in the $1,500,000,000 PWA appropriation to be asked of Congress by the President within a few days.

AMERICA AND ITS BANDITS.

The question of the hour before America: Should the Government raise a new draft army to catch its most notorious bandits?

* * * *

The fight against Dillinger is the biggest since Belleau Wood.

* * * *

They say there is danger of a war with Japan, but America can't bother with it. It's too busy fighting a lone bandit.

* * * *

But there is no need for pessimism. Dillinger may come in and give himself up as soon as the motion picture rights to him expire.

* * * *

* * * *

It has already taken him longer to get the Lindbergh kidnapers than it did to win the Revolutionary War, the Spanish-American War and the New Deal.

* * * *

And it may yet go down in the record that more blood was spilled catching Dillinger than in breaking the Hindenburg line.

* * * *

Of course, by the time this is in type, Dillinger may have been caught or slain, but even so, the country's record in its fights against outlaws in the last few years will put it in last place in any bush league.

* * * *

Incidentally, why is it that in all raids against the hideouts of notorious criminals the raiders so often let the outlaw escape, but catch a bevy of young women? Are we conducting our pursuits on a "For Women Only" basis?"

* * * *

If we didn't trust our newspapers and newsreels we'd think these pursuits of notorious killers in America were being done by Hollywood directors who were trying to make the comedy and tragedy effects 50-50.

* * * *

The only difference is that Hollywood always catches the criminal inside of three reels.

* * * *

The Government gets him inside of three years. (If he sends in his address and states his reception hours.)

* * * *

Ultimately, of course, our American killers are dealt with properly. But this is generally because of their vanity. They get the old longing for new photographs in the newspapers.

* * * *

So what?

* * * *

So they come in and surrender to some prosecuting attorney who can make the necessary arrangements with the photographers.

* * * *

But why complain? All our jails are filled, anyhow, and with fellows who steal cinnamon buns from bakery wagons.

Showdown May Be Had Today On Steel Code

Revision Demands to Be Aired Before Johnson, and Industry.

A show down on Congressional demands for revision of the steel code probably will be reached today at a New York conference between Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and industry representatives.

The recovery administrator probably will insist on sharp alteration of the so-called basing point system, criticized recently by the Federal Trade Commission after it investigated the steel code for the Senate.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, has charged administrtion of the steel code rested wih large corporaions. The Steel Institute, code authority for the industry, has prepared several code changes for submission to Johnson, but no inkling of whether they answer Borah's complaints has been forthcoming.

Recovery officials have indicated their desire to revise the code prior to its expiration and probable renewal May 30.

Friends of small distributors protested the little operators lost lucrative business they normally obtained close to their plants because of the basing point practice under which freight rates are figured from the basing point rather than from the place of manufacture.

Meanwhile, the National Labor Board kept in close touch with developments at Birmingham, Ala., where 400 workers of the Republic Steel Co. went on strike Wednesday. Those participating in the walkout were members of Franklin Delano Roosevelt Local 137, of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor.

The board was notified the strike resulted from failure of the company to recognize a committee chosen at an election conducted under its supervision.

There Is Equality Before Law If Bank Rolls Are Equal

By Robert Quillen

Some weeks ago the law took its revenge on two groups of young men who had violated the rules of society.

The boys in the first group were black. They were guilty of murder.

They had grown up much as domestic cattle do. They could neither read nor write. They were stupid. Except for their cotton shirts, their overalls and their shapeless shoes, they differed but little from the simple creatures that were brought to America in the hold of slave ships.

The law butchered them.

The other group was composed of white boys. They were guilty of operating a whisky still in the mountains.

They were dressed like the black boys—cotton shirts, overalls, shapeless shoes. They never had possessed underclothes or socks.

They had never "been to school." They had never before ventured from the shadow of their mountains. They had never slept in a bed. They were part of the stagant backwash left in mountain coves when the first wave of pioneer emigrants invaded the wilderness. They kept soul and body together by the only means they knew.

The law sent them to prison.

The guilty must be punished, you will say, and the law can make no exceptions.

But suppose the members of that first group—the killers—had been rich and powerful racketeers.

They would be out on bond now. The witnesses against them would disappear. Shrewd lawyers would find ways to trick justice and save them.

Or suppose the others—the mountain boys—had been "big shots" of the prohibition era.

Federal agents found their little still, but none would have seen their block-long breweries. Their trucks, laden with alcohol and often escorted by police, would have gone to market unmolested. Rich bankers would have financed them and the keenest of lawyers advised them.

What does it mean? What can it mean except that poverty and ignorance are the only crimes?

Strip away all pretense and you must face the ugly truth that laws apply only to the poor and the friendless.

Roosevelt Asks Study Of Cigarette Tax Cut

President Roosevelt yesterday ordered a special study of the Vinson bill proposing a 40 per cent reduction in the cigarette tax, the Associated Press reported.

Pending the study, the President told Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee and Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, author of the bill, he would keep an open mind on the proposal. Mr. Roosevelt asked Secretary Morgenthau, Secretary Wallace and Director Douglas of the budget to make the investigation.

Plane Carriers to Visit Gotham; Dredging Fund

The City of New York eventually will pay $48,000 of Public Works money to allow its citizens to visit the Navy's aircraft carriers, Lexington and Saratoga, when the fleet visits that city.

This was disclosed yesterday when the PWA announced an allotment of $48,000 to the Navy Department for dredging in the Hudson River. Secretary Ickes said the presence of the two vessels, which never have been in New York Harbor, had been requested by city officials.

The Passion Play.

This year the Passion Play will be given at Oberammergau, and I advise all Americans who are planning a trip to Europe not to miss it. I have been going to the theater for 50 years; I have seen Salvini, Sarah Bernhardt, Duse, Edwin Booth, Irving, Possart, Mansfield and innumerable other famous players. But I have never seen any drama on any stage that compared in impressiveness with the Passion Play at Oberammergau.

Let me advise all those who see it to sit right down in front, as near to the sage as possible. The first time I saw it I was close to the stage; and although in those days the front rows were exposed to the weather, and we were soaked by transient showers, I am glad I sat where I did; because the tremendous drama took place directly before our eyes, and we were oblivious to everything else. Ten years later I sat in the more fashionable seats, 30 or 40 rows back; and what with the big crowd between me and the stage, the rustling, whispering, opera-glasses, and other annoyances, the play did not seem so impressive.

This drama is a direct survival of the Mystery Plays of the Middle Ages, and has been the center of attraction in Oberammergau for several centuries. Like the Continental Mystery Plays, it lasts all day; there are allegorical tableaux from the Old Testament and scenes from the New; so that the whole play is a transcript from the Bible.

To me the most heartrending scenes are not those of the Crucifixion itself. I suppose one steels oneself for that part of the tragedy. I was most shaken by the parting of Jesus from his mother; when she asked him when she would meet him again, the men and women around me were sobbing aloud.

The other scene that I shall remember the longest was the procession to the Cross. Seven hundred people were on the stage; and every man and woman, every little boy and girl, displayed such sincerity that it did not seem in the least like a drama. I felt as if I were present myself at the greatest event in human history. The children took up stones, shrieking, "To the cross with the Galilean!" Then suddenly the tumult ceased, and in the awful silence the Master turned around to the little group of women who were tearfully following him and spoke: "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves and for your children. For, behold, the days are coming in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck. Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us."

No End of Books

By
Theodore Hall

WITH a pile of books before me today, I do not take it so kindly of H. A. Overstreet to flaunt his title in my face—"A Guide to Civilized Loafing" (Norton, $2). His little volume is inconveniently and uncomfortably pursuasive. "Just to fool around," he writes, "there can be a wisdom in this that, at times, passes all work-bound understanding." Then he proceeds to suggest any number of happy amusements, at first glance somewhat more strenuous than "fooling around," with which we can loaf and invite our souls.

THEO. HALL.

I am all for them, from planning a pine board in the cellar to paddling a canoe on a mountain lake. Some of the devices are more ingenious, such as the "spontaneous drama," a play made up out of whole cloth as the actors go along, or the "verse choir," the reading of poetry aloud in chorus. But painting or dlying, touring across country in a collector's search for old inns and hydroelectric dams or taking up archery in the backyard, Mr. Overstreet's suggestions serve only to lead to his moral—that the world is a wide place and that we can glean from it a great deal more significance and fun than the narrow span of our bread-and-butter jobs provide.

This message, with appropriate advices about learning to live with oneself and to take time easily, Mr. Overstreet presents very engagingly, indeed. His buoyant optimism is not too constant—"We have to take some things seriously if we are to gain for ourselves the right to take many things gaily." All through the book itself he proves the point of one constant purpose made informal and friendly along the way. He stops and loafs, chats pleasantly and quotes frequent poetry. I'd be ready to follow him into any mild and cheerful use of leisure—if I had the time.

Lyman Beecher, in Theodore Parker's words, was "the father of more brains than any other man in America." Four daughters and seven sons, not one of whom but was at farthest remove from a nonentity, seem enough to prove the case. Henry Ward, the preacher; Harriet, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin;" Catherine, pioneer in education for women, and Isabella, suffragist, would alone be sufficient to fill any man's quiver. And old Lyman, best known preacher in the country, thrice married, fanatic hater of duels and drink and slavery, reared them all in the way they should go. Harriet Beecher Stowe's grandson, Lyman Beecher Stowe, tells the full tale of this "amusing, lovable and outrageous" clan in "Saints, Sinners, and Beechers" (Bobbs-Merrill, $3.75). It's a grand and lively book.

* * * *

"The Devil's Drummer" (Reynal & Hitchcock, $2.50), aside from the title, is precisely the kind of book I like. Tex Harding, born Harry Browne in Austria in 1898, is what we have come to call a world-hobo. At 14 he had run away from home and gone to Germany and then to South America. There he became successively a Gaucho on the pampas (Garibaldi had once done that and had brought back to Europe the red shirt, whose varicolored descendants are still with us), a wandering musician in the Cordilleras, a seal-hunter in Chile, a copper and gold miner in Peru, a diamond hunter for 18 months among the wild Jivaro Indians of Brazil, a pearl-fisher in the Galapagos Islands, an alligator hunter in Colombia, and an oil driller in Venezuela.

But the story of all this he does not tell in the present book, which opens with his being a captain in the Mexican army supporting President Huerta in 1922. Adventures there were terminated only by a 13,000-mile horseback ride from Mexico City to Rio de Janerio, the first and only on record. At Rio he met an old companion in arms, the keenest of lawyers advised them.

What does it mean? What can it mean except that poverty and ignorance are the only crimes?

Strip away all pretense and you must face the ugly truth that laws apply only to the poor and the friendless.

Latest of the portmanteau books is "Out of the Rough" (Windward House, $2), by Joseph T. Shaw, which will entertain you as a light novel and teach you to play A-1 golf at the same time. It does a very neat job of both. The hero, a duffer, goes to Scotland, takes up instruction under a gr-r-r-rand old pro, wins the test match, and marries the girl.

Goss Proposes To Oust British Aviation Critic

Will Ask Deportation for Mackensie - Kennedy When Visa Expires.

Maj. C. J. H. Mackensie-Kennedy, British airplane designer, yesterday was threatened with deportation by one of his Congressional critics.

The Britisher recently caused a stir on Capitol Hill with his views of the international standing of American military and naval aviation. He was accused of being a "spy" by members of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

Maj. Mackenzie-Kennedy, thickset, heavy-jowled organizer of Russia's air forces during the czarist regime and holder of an airplane gun patent on which he is suing the Navy for $500,000, came to this country four years ago on a visitor's visa which he has had extended at intervals of six months. The last extension expires in August.

As the Naval Affairs Committee went into executive session to determine what it should do with Mackenzie-Kennedy's charts analyzing airplanes and engines of leading world powers and placing America's air equipment not far from the bottom of the list, Representative Edward W. Goss (Republican), Connecticut, said he intended to ask the Labor Department to see that the Britisher is granted no further extensions of his permit to stay in this country.

Calls Attitude Lynch Law.

Informed of Goss' attitude toward his presence in the United States, Mackenzie-Kennedy retorted:

"That's just another application of lynch law. I intend to remain in this country until my suit against the Navy is heard. To send me out of the country at this time would reflect most unfavorably on United States conception of justice and would constitute an infringement of my right of action."

"We have made preliminary checks of his charts and found them erroneous," said Goss of the Briton. "We have now asked for some further checks.

"After those are in, I will try to get the Military Committee to ask the Labor Department to see that his permit to stay in this country is not extended after it expires next time.

"This man has already done great damage to American aviation, and we ought to stop him now."

McFarlane Defends Briton.

But another member of the committee, Representative W. D. McFarlane (Democrat), of Texas, who filed a minority report to the committee's whitewash of America's international air rating, held a contrary view of Mackenzie-Kennedy's charts. He said:

"This is the first check and double check of America's position as an air power the committee has had. Aviation experts in this country have checked these charts and found them 97 per cent accurate.

"They show that the United States has spent in the neighborhood of $2,000,000,000 in the air, and all it has got is flying experience. Our equipment is absolute junk, obsolete as far as military performance is concerned."

Representative McFarlane said he was including the Mackenzie-Kennedy charts in his report.

Wanderbirds to Hike Sunday Up Historic Chesapeake Canal

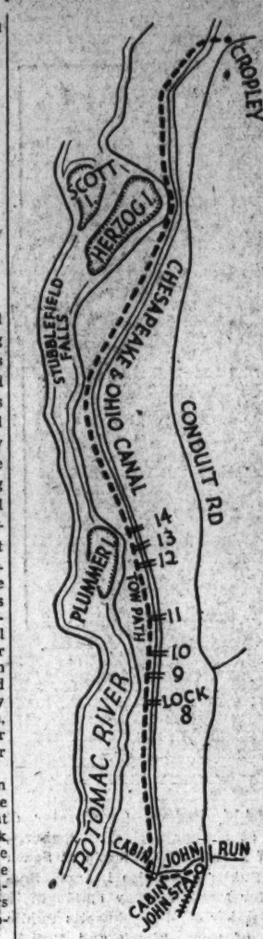
Group Gathers at Noon at Cabin John Terminus to Follow Towpath.

By Robert Shosteck.

Readers of The Post are invited to join with the Wanderbirds on their hike Sunday along the towpath above Cabin John. The group meets at noon at the end of the Cabin John carline for this eight-mile trip.

This Sunday the Wanderbirds will follow the historic towpath along the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal. This famous canal, begun in 1829 and completed in 1850, was designed as a great link between the East and the expanding West. Unfortunately for the backers of the canal, the growing Western city of Wheeling was linked with the East by rail before the canal reached Cumberland. Since the canal could not compete profitably with the railroad for the commerce with the Ohio Valley, the canal owners ended their enterprise at Cumberland. For nearly 100 years the canal served as an important artery for the shipment of coal from western Maryland mines. It was abandoned about 1924. Today the canal, partly drained, serves as the home for fish, reptiles, amphibians and water plants, and as a pleasant course for Washington canoeists.

The terminus of the Cabin John carline is but a half-mile from the canal. Meeting at the terminus at noon, we descend the steep bank of Cabin John Run, following the run to the canal. Our trip up the canal toward Cropley will be a leisurely one, with several detours into the nearby woods on the program.



Cactus Retreat Here.

One of the most interesting features of the trip will be a detour into a miniature cactus desert, located on a small, rocky and sandy tableland, upon which the prickly pear cactus makes its home. In the summer the spreading and reclining slabs of this Opuntia cactus reminds one of the deserts. Only the rocks tell us that we are not on the great deserts of the West. This trip should interest those Wanderbirds who hail from the West. They can tell us what a poor imitation of a desert this is!

In June this cactus bears large, waxy, yellow flowers which bloom at night. These showy flowers are borne on the upper part of the younger slabs or stems of the cactus. The cactus leaves, when present, are very minute and soon wither away. Such fleshy stems and minute leaves constitute the adaptation of the cactus to an extremely dry environment, one in which the prevention of evaporation of water is of paramount importance.

Turtles Throng Canal.

The muddy banks of the canal serve as the home of many interesting types of aquatic animals. Painted turtles and mud turtles are fairly common here. The former is a particularly attractive species—attractive as turtles go, with pretty red and yellow stripes on its neck and legs. The harmless little garter snake is quite abundant along the water's edge, scurrying into the canal at the approach of trespassers.

Salamanders and tritons are common in the many small streams and pools near the canal. These retiring amphibians may be found under rocks or leaf debris in these pools and near water. In quiet pools the tadpoles of both salamander and frog now swarm by the thousands. These water-breathing young ones can be reared successfully at home in Mason jars if, during their early infancy, they are provided with well-aerated water.

Perhaps the showiest flower now in bloom among the rocks and on the cliffs near the canal is the Columbine, whose Western cousin is Colorado's State flower. Many other wild flowers and shrubs are now blooming in profusion in the wet alluvial bottoms and along stream banks in this region. The pawpaw tree, now in flower, is the temperate zone relative of many tropical fruits belonging to the Custard-Apple family. Its smooth, purple-skinned fruit is very tasty, and ripens when touched by frost.

Wild Ginger Found.

In the shade beneath the pawpaws the kidney-shaped leaves of the wild ginger are likely to attract our attention, more so than the small, dull-brown flowers which lie close to the ground. This interesting drug plant has a fragrant odor and a rather spicy taste. Among the other heralds of May which make this hike so attractive are the red-bud or Judas-tree, the dainty Dutchman's breeches, the anemone, May-apple, cranesbill, and the corydalis.

The entire hike will cover about eight miles and we should return to Cabin John station about 4:30 p. m. Hikers are advised to bring lunches along and to wear old clothes and low shoes. A collapsible drinking cup would be very convenient.

• • • •

This Saturday the Wanderbirds will make merry at an evening campfire party at Pierce Mill picnic ground, in Rock Creek Park. The program will include music, singing, and anecdotes by veteran hikers. Bring along your weenies and marshmallows and be prepared for a good time and an opportunity to get acquainted with your fellow Wanderbirds! The group will meet at the end of the Mount Pleasant car line at 7 p. m. for the half-mile walk through the park to the Mill. Those coming by automobile should drive out Park road to the parking ground off the road, across from the tea house. Bring a flashlight if you own one.

District Asks $54,000 To Fight Tuberculosis

Funds to provide for enlargement of facilities for treating victims of tuberculosis were asked by the District Commissioners in a supplemental estimate for $54,000, sent yesterday to the Budget Bureau.

The money would permit an increased personnel of visiting nurses, new equipment for the tuberculosis clinic and additional physicians. The additional equipment and nurses were recommended in a report submitted last week by the special tuberculosis investigating committee.

NEWSPAPER WOMEN, like their male compatriots, are supposed to be pretty helpless in the face of immediate and pressing demands for an accurate spelling of a stickler like Narcissus.

It is not unreasonable for them to suppose, then, that other women, even though they be the very leaders in feminine official Washington, might also encounter difficulties under similar circumstances.

As a measure for prevention of embarrassment to both sides, therefore, the Newspaper Women's Club which is planning to pit some of its members against women from the highest official circles in the Capital in a spelling-bee Tuesday, is preparing a list of 650 words for distribution among all contestants. These are all the words that the ladies will be asked to spell.

Mrs. Homer Cummings, Mrs. Alice Longworth, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Theodore Pickett and Mrs. Grace Brousseau have been asked to judge which of the ladies studied her list most effectively. Senator Bennett Clark, of Missouri, and Henry Suydam, Washington correspondent for the Brooklyn Eagle, will function as pronouncers.

The names of the lady spellers are being kept a secret until WJSV puts them all on the air at 9:30 p. m.

Washington, the Nation's most paraded city, seems also to have become, not unexpectedly, the city of the most parade broadcasts.

When the Capital's secondary traffic police force, the School Boys' Patrol, marches down the Avenue today, both WMAL and WJSV will be represented in the reviewing stand with the usual complement of microphones and announcers not yet fully recovered from last week's Cherry Blossom Festival parading.

A matter of no little importance to some 3,000 Washington school boys, the event has taken on almost monumental significance to James Alfonte, 10, of John Eaton School, and Preston Ray, 16, of Western High School. For after a series of auditions last night, WJSV has decided to turn over to them the lion's share of the parade broadcasting.

Bob Trout will do the incidental microphoning for the Columbia Station. WMAL will be cared for by Bill Coyle and John Mayo.

ALL persons over 12 years of age are requested to skip the following and get on with their comic page reading.

Aunt Sue, of WRC's Aunt Sue and Polly, came up yesterday to find out what we thought of the Dandee Poodlescatstown Club, of Poodlescatstown, holding an election again this year. We said we thought it would be a good idea inasmuch as a lot of you have been writing letters about it, and, anyway, no club is really and truly a club unless it elects officers once a year.

Aunt Sue felt the same way about it, and we promised her that if she would fix things so the election could be held we would do our part by printing election results in this department daily.

Aunt Sue said the club's present president, Cinnamon Bear, is pretty well liked in Poodlescatstown and probably will be a candidate for re-election. He can expect stiff opposition, however, from Muley Wuley, whose activities in putting down the villianous Mr. Squizzle Squazzles have attracted a strong following. In fact, Aunt Sue gave us to understand that the political pot in Poodlescatstown can be said, to borrow a word from our best political writers, to be "brewing."

Pink Eye, vice president of the club; Pep, its second vice president, and Brown Doggie, its secretary, are all candidates to succeed themselves. But if anyone thinks Curly Cue, Chipper and Duckfoot de Luby won't make things pretty hot for them, they don't know their Poodlescatstown politics, that's all.

Apparently Manager Joe Cronin already has decided what the trouble with the Washington ball club is and has applied his own remedy.

He may, however, have a thing or two to say in explaining recent alterations in the Nat's line-up. Or he may be willing to dispense a few pointers on how to get along in the world and still have a lot of fun playing baseball.

At any rate, he's agreed to an interview with The Post's Margaret Santry on WMAL this morning at 11:15. Anything can happen.

Whitecaps.

Navy to Issue Call Tuesday For 16 Fliers

College Men Given Chance for 2 Years' Training as Reserve Pilots.

An opportunity for college graduates to be trained as either Navy or Marine Corps aviators will be made available Tuesday at the Naval Air Station, Anacostia, D. C., it was announced yesterday by Lieut. M. M. Cloukey, U. S. N.

A final group of 16 men, 10 to be trained as reserve officers in the Navy and 6 in the Marine Corps, will be sent for the first year of training to the Naval Flight School at Pensacola, Fla. The second year of training will be spent aboard aircraft carriers or with flight squadrons.

Two types of preliminary physical examinations will be given, one for regular reserve officers and the other especially designed for aviators. The latter test is extremely difficult to pass, Lieut. Cloukey said. For this reason it will be necessary to examine at least 40 before the final selection of 16 men is made May 15.

It has been the experience of the examining board, Lieut. Cloukey said, that only 30 per cent of college men are able to pass the tests. Applicants are invited to get in immediate touch with Lieut. Cloukey at the Naval Air Station, so that applications may be filled out before May 1 at 9 a. m., when the board meets to examine candidates.

Successful candidates, after completing the two years' course in flight training, will be designated as reserve officers in the Navy or the Marine Corps with the rank of naval aviator.

What was pre-war whiskey like?

LET FOUR ROSES SHOW YOU!

TRY Four Roses and you'll taste the kind of whiskey 92% of America's drinkers preferred before the war.

It's not one of those common liquors that are loaded with harsh green whiskey.

Four Roses is a Maryland Rye. It has the same quality today that made it famous in the old days. Not a drop of raw whiskey in it!

That's why Four Roses is not only a pure, smooth drink, but when used with moderation, there's no "hangover" in it.

It takes more skill to make a whiskey the way Four Roses is made. But Frankfort has been making whiskey for four generations. Its yeast culture—key-ingredient in distilling fine whiskey—has been carefully guarded for 50 years. Frankfort knows how!

Four Roses is bottled only in full-measure packages. It comes sealed in the Frankfort Pack that makes tampering or adulteration impossible. Just try Four Roses—a whiskey that, in "blind" taste-tests, has beaten 30 other famous brands.

Try these other fine whiskies!

PAUL JONES

A fine quality whiskey that has been a favorite with American drinkers since 1865.

Senator King Honors Dern At Reception

Secretary of War Guest at Brilliant Social Function.

Bower of Blooms Create Summery Setting at Sulgrave Club.

The atmosphere of the Sulgrave Club, redolent with new blossoms, simulated an out-of-doors summer evening at a reception given by Senator and Mrs. William H. King last night in honor of the Secretary of War, Mr. George H. Dern, and Mrs. Dern.

The interior of the graceful old house on Massachusetts avenue was a veritable bower of fragrant spring flowers and branches of pale pink apple blossoms, illuminated by soft light from crystal chandeliers and wall tapers.

Senator and Mrs. King received with their honor guests at the head of the stairs, before a bank of dark palms and pale blossoms. The hostess wore a particularly becoming gown of bright spring flower print on a dark background, made on long lines with a medium-length train. The neck, high in the front and low in the back, was faced with a narrow white rouching.

Several hundred members of diplomatic, official and resident society attended the reception and remained for dancing and a buffet supper.

Mrs. Roosevelt Lends Prestige To Home Drive

Plans to Attend Opening of Scouts' Exhibit Tomorrow.

The presence of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at the opening of the leisure time activities exhibit at the National Girl Scouts' "Little House" tomorrow promises an auspicious start for Better Homes in America Week, which will be the occasion of the First Lady's appearance there.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be received by Dr. Lillian M. Gilbreath, of Montclair, N. J., consulting engineer and a member of the Girl Scouts' National board; Mrs. Frederick Brooke, member of the Girl Scouts' National board, and Miss Josephine Schain, of New York, Girl Scouts' National director.

Mrs. Roosevelt, honorary president of the National Girl Scouts, is thus continuing the interest of the White House in this historic house, built on Sherman Square in 1923.

In 1924, when the house was moved to the present location, Mrs. Coolidge laid the corner stone.

In April, 1925, Mrs. Coolidge opened Better Homes Week by coming to the "Little House" and witnessing home-making activities.

President and Mrs. Coolidge were honor guests at a Vermont turkey dinner November 7, 1926, cooked and served by Girl Scouts.

President and Mrs. Hoover opened Better Homes Week in 1931 and were served a 24-cent luncheon, cooked and served by Girl Scouts.

Mrs. William Howard Taft and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, honorary vice presidents of Girl Scouts, Inc., have honored the "Little House" on several occasions.

Household Servants Latest to Get 'Code'

Hours Held Responsible for Turnover.

Philadelphia, April 28 (AP).—Long hours and unsystematized work are responsible for the great turnover in household servants, according to Mrs. Wayne W. Babcock, chairman of the Philadelphia Council of Household Occupation, which has recently drawn up a "domestic code" for servants.

The "code," designed to stop other housewives luring cooks and maids from their employers by offering added inducements was discussed at a recent meeting of the council.

"Just when a maid is well trained, she leaves, many women discover," Mrs. Babcock said, "but that is because they do not manage their households intelligently."

The "code" by which the council members have agreed to abide provides for a 60-hour week and a vacation schedule; a $10-a-week minimum wage for a maid living in the house and $16 to $17 for a maid living elsewhere and paying for her own meals. The agreement also provides compensation for overtime.

"Bridge Dress" New Type Gown For Informal Summer Evenings

SPECIALIZATION has invaded the fashion realm to such an extent the clothes-conscience woman is forced to keep one eye on the clock and the other on her wardrobe.

If she takes seriously the mandates of the mighty designers she springs out of bed into a breakfast coat. Just before noon she hops into a tailored street ensemble. Then she dons an afternoon ensemble. Comes 4 o'clock, she puts on a cocktail dress. Scarcely has she swallowed a cocktail before it is time to get into a dinner gown. And then, if she is still able to stand, she must climb into a formal gown.

As if that weren't enough for any one day, along comes the bridge dress. The French dressmakers are responsible for this newest fad, which is really delightful for the summer months. From May to October there are precious few occasions where formal dress is obligatory. The bridge dress gracefully takes the place of the out-and-out evening gown.

Printed taffeta is used for many of these interesting new costumes. Agnes-Drecoll has designed some adorable ones with long sleeves, high drapery in front and a slightly drooping effect across the shoulders in back.

Patou has found the bridge dress a happy medium for spreading his blue gospel. Sapphire is his first love this season and he uses it to excellent effect in long, slim dresses with sleeves embroidered in cellophane and openwork yokes.

Jenny is another blue exponent. She prefers a cloudy, pastel shade for long tunics of mossy rayon crepe, to be worn with black skirts and black three-quarter length coats. Although she calls these bridge ensembles, they are delightful for all elaborate afternoon affairs.

Chanel makes her bridge dresses of filmy chiffon with subdued flower themes. She uses considerable rayon organdie with tiny rayon embroidered bouquets scattered over pale backgrounds.

The designers declare they intended the bridge dress to be worn to a bridge party. But so wearable is this new style, the woman who thinks the King of Diamonds is an African mine owner will want a bridge dress.

"Decency Campaign" Begun.

Grafton, W. Va., April 28 (Spl.).—All residents of Grafton are being asked by members of a "League of Decency" here to shun "indecent shows and immoral business establishments." John Hechmer has been elected league president, and Miss Clara Korte, secretary.

Play Will Aid Vassar Fund

National Theater Players First Night Taken for Scholarships.

Monday, April 30, the opening night of the National Theater Players, has been taken over by the Washington Chapter of the Vassar Alumni, who are sponsoring the play, "The Pursuit of Happiness." The proceeds will go to the scholarship fund, which sends two girls to Vassar each year. On alternate years the alumni donates sufficient funds for the two scholarships, and the other years they find some way of "earning" the money.

This year Miss Grace Roper, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, has been an active member of the committee in charge of affairs.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Roper have taken boxes for the performance. Miss Ballentine Becomes Bride Of Mr. Tarry

Wed at Residence, Couple Depart on Journey Through North.

With only members of the two families present, the wedding of Miss Mary Laird Ballentine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Laird Ballentine, to Mr. George Lewis Tarry, son of Mrs. Henry Edwin Tarry, took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the home of the bride's parents on Calvert street. Spring flowers were arranged throughout the house. The Rev. Herbert Scott Smith, rector of St. Margaret's Church, performed the ceremony before an improvised altar in the drawing room.

Mr. Ballentine gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a gown of ivory satin made on simple lines. The neckline was high and the straight skirt terminated in a fan-shaped train. The sleeves were of medium length and the bride wore mitts of satin. Her veil of Limerick lace, which had been worn by her great-grandmother, was simply arranged in cap fashion. She carried a sheaf of calla lilies.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Lee Poe Hart, sister of the bride, who had on an attractive gown of powder blue moss crepe, made on flaring lines with a high neckline and long, tight-fitting sleeves. With this she wore a small white straw hat and carried an armful of spring flowers.

Mr. Lee Poe Hart served as best man for Mr. Tarry. Later Mr. Tarry and his bride left for a trip through the North, the latter wearing a small black hat and a smart woolen suit of black with a three-quarter length coat which had a standing ruff collar. The blouse was of aquamarine crepe.

The Grapefruit Invades Field Of Beauty Aids

A Cosmetic Line Includes Skin Toner Made of Its Oil.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

GRAPEFRUIT is highly respected by housewives. But lately its popularity with beauty specialists has carried it beyond the realm of edibility and set it up on dressing tables as a beauty aid. A recent release from Hollywood states many leading actresses are using grapefruit juice as an astringent.

The manufacturer of a well-known line of cosmetics sponsors a skin toner made from grapefruit oil. The petite young person who sells it in a downtown store declares it is incomparable for use immediately after a cleansing cream—it doesn't matter what make cream—to cut any excess oil which may be clinging to the skin, and to remove acid from the inner pores. She added it makes the skin feel wonderfully "toned up."

Canyon Shadows.

Dawn pink, dusk white, canyon shadows and rainbow jade are just a few of the alluring names of the opalescent jewelry on display in an F street store.

It comes in sets which include clips, earrings, pins, necklaces and bracelets. But the pieces may be bought separately if the purchaser chooses.

The names are no more exquisite than the jewelry. Worn as contrast to bright spring shades, they offer a striking smartness to a plain costume. And for the fluffy, dainty girlish frocks, which appear more and more as the season advances, they are ideally suited.

* * * *

To Embellish Note Paper.

The floral seals on sale in a local shop have a number of uses. They may serve as seals on the back of an envelope. They offer an unusual touch to plain note paper. And they're pretty on party packages and prizes.

* * * *

Have You a Bald Lawn.

The gentleman in charge of the plant department of a downtown store pointed with pride to several large sacks of grass seed.

"There is nothing worse than a bald-headed lawn," he declared. "Nothing!" (Some bald-headed men might disagree.) "So, we're promoting this specially prepared seed which will turn a bare plot into a mass of green. A special product at a special price."

All of which was good sales talk on some good seed, priced 89 cents for 5 pounds.

* * * *

It Baffled Customers.

The colored metal cases on the cosmetics counter looked like lipstick—but they weren't. They weren't there for fooling people, either, but they did. More than one curious customer paused to pull the bit of string sticking out of the top, just to see what would happen. Nothing did, except the string continued to grow longer.

A kindly clerk put an end to that state of affairs by putting up a placard, "Dental Floss."

A compact case with its useful contents is just one more small item that belongs on every bathroom shelf. There'll be no kick from the budget—it's only ten cents.

* * * *

Even Chewing Gum.

A new cleaner is a genius of versatility! It cleans everything from lipstick spots on dresses to chewing gum on rugs—and it never leaves a sign of circle.

It goes after grease spots avidly, thinks nothing of stains, be they tar, oil, paint, wax or soot. Its talents extend to furniture polishing, and even to shoe polishing. A small can costs 25 cents, and a larger one 50.

* * * *

Do You Like Souvenirs?

Visitors to Washington who are interested in souvenirs should stop by a certain gift shop. There's an abundance of them, ranging from miniature Capitols to Lincoln Memorials.

But aside from the usual sort of souvenir there are some quite extraordinary. A dresser compact, for instance. On the outside is an engraving of the Capitol, and on the inside powder, lipstick and rouge. A small pocket knife shows the chief show places of the city all along its slender case.

* * * *

Unbelievable!

A rustic chair, bench and table for $3.95!

This unusual offer is made by a downtown store just in time to interest the many seekers for garden and terrace furniture.

Rustic wood can stand the wear and tear of the elements as no other furniture material can. In fact, the more weather-beaten it becomes the more attractive it is.

This particular suite is so sturdily made it will last not only this year but for many years after.

Their Standards Improved, Maintains French Nurse

"THE WAR DID much to improve the rating of nurses in France," says Mlle. Cornet-Auquier (above), assistant director of the Florence Nightingale Nursing School in Bordeaux.

Requirements There Are Continually Growing Stricter Profession Not as Overcrowded as in U. S., Says Distinguished Member.

THE ILL WIND that swept the world in 1914 did some good when it caused the establishment of the Florence Nightingale Nursing School in Bordeaux, France.

Mlle. Cornet-Auquier, assistant director, yesterday told something of the work being done at the school, which was given by the American nurses as a memorial to the 296 American nurses killed in the World War.

Miss Noyes Is Head.

The school is governed by an advisory committee, of which Miss Clara Noyes, of the American Red Cross, is the head. Mlle. Auquier is in Washington to attend the Nurses Biennial Convention.

"The war did much to improve the rating of nurses in France," Mlle. Auquier said yesterday. "Before then, almost anyone could be a nurse, and consequently the profession suffered. Today the standards are almost as high as in the United States, and they are constantly improving.

"The girl who wants to be a nurse in France now must complete her secondary school education and take a three-year training course. Our requirements are growing stricter every year."

Mlle. Auquier explained the nursing profession was not so overcrowded in France as it is in this country, as there are fewer training schools, consequently fewer nurses.

Few Special Nurses.

"Most of the nurses in our country are employed in hospitals," she said. "We have few special nurses such as you have. Another reason the profession is not so crowded in our country is nursing offers few inducements: The hours are long, the pay small."

Although efforts are being made to shorten working hours and increase the pay of nurses in France, progress in this direction has been very slow, according to Mlle. Auquier, and even student nurses work nine hours a day.

"So you see," she laughingly said, "while your nurses may have the ideal of service, that is about all nurses do have in my country."

Another distinguished nurse, who is in Washington to attend the convention is Mlle. Lucie Odier, of Geneva. Both she and Mlle. Cornet-Auquier will make short addresses during the convention.

Mlle. Odier is a member of the International Red Cross committee in Geneva. Her work is advising national heads of Red Cross services and helping them with their problems.

"We also do much work in helping different countries with Red Cross organizations to exchange ideas and get the benefit of each other's experience. Some of our most interesting work has been done in connection with the Red Cross League in Paris."

How To Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Hospitals and Road Accidents.

Hospitals and physicians are almost swamped by a tax put on them by a modern convenience, the automobile. They are forced by public opinion to take care of people hurt on the road by automobiles, and yet there is no public opinion, law or social machinery which compels the parties to whom service is rendered to pay for what they receive. The British are attempting to correct this abuse.

On the 1st of last December the London correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association reported that Parliament was considering and would pass a law requiring everyone who drove an automobile to take out insurance covering himself and the occupants of his car against the cost of accidents. One of the provisions of this law is that in case of accidents in which any injured person has been cared for in a hospital, such hospital must be paid for the services rendered, at a cost fixed by the law for different kinds of service. It is proposed to add services by physicians to the provisions of the bill.

Any physician caring for a patient hurt in a road accident is to be compensated by the insurance company in amounts fixed by the law. The payments are to be made by the company to the hospital and the physician rendering the service and not to the injured person, to be paid over by him.

The injuries occurring in road accidents are generally severe and dangerous. The machinery responsible is heavy, the speed is high and the impact is great. When a wound is made it is likely to be a crushing one, bones are broken and the probability is that there will be considerable soiling and infection. Those who are injured are often unconscious, and practically all of them suffer from profound shock. Every consideration of humanity demands they be given prompt service. It is not feasible to await investigation of ability or willingness to pay. If a hospital is accessible, the patient is carried there and, if not, he is carried into some physician's home, or into some nearby home, and a physician sent for. Such cases usually need expensive bandages and other dressings, and disinfectants and other drugs. The immediate service is not all that is required. Fracture cases and some other cases require weeks of nursing, of good medical care and of shelter and feeding. Before the injured person has been returned to health to a degree that makes it possible for him to go to his home the hospitals and physicians have used up no small amount of their supplies on him and have fed him for days or weeks, and the nurses and physicians have rendered him much service requiring time. The rule is that they are not compensated, with many exceptions, of course. Even when there is insurance the injured person considers the amount paid as compensation to him for his pain and discomfort and loss of time.

Under existing laws and social conditions the hospital, the physician and the nurse must whistle for their bills. The material used and the expense otherwise incurred they must bear. Even if the injured person be insured, easy transportation makes it possible for him to escape without paying. Even if he has property it is apt to be in another State, for good roads and automobiles have obliterated political boundaries, and forced collections in remote communities are costly and difficult.

Operation on Baby.

Mrs. G. G. writes:

1. Is it possible to operate on a baby 20 months old for removal of enlarged tonsils and adenoids?

2. Also, would it be harmful for a person with infected gall bladder to take cod liver oil regularly? Said person is underweight and run down.

Reply.

1. As a rule, it is not.

2. It might be.

Lack of Funds Force Orphans Out Into World

Closing of Orphanage Wing Turns 17 Little Boys Under 12 Out.

For 63 years the doors of St. John's Orphanage on F street have opened in wide, friendly fashion to receive homeless little girls and boys. But last June the bad wolf, who had been growing increasingly voracious, came so close not only the doors but one whole wing of the orphanage was closed.

And when that wing was closed 17 little boys, not one of them older than 12, left the safe confines of the orphanage, and went out into the world beyond.

And today where 70 children played in the big halls and gardens, 35 are left. Thirty-five little cots are empty while hundreds of District children have no place to sleep all because money has stopped coming in to finance the orphanage.

But help is at hand. The Junior Guild, composed of the younger members of St. John's Church, have decided the time has come for action, and they are setting out to find money to open up that closed wing of the orphanage. And rumor has it they will not only give benefits but will waylay forgetful parishioners who do not realize a few dollars may provide a happy home for some hungry little child.

The Strip Play.

One of the simplest of all types of hands to play is that involving the so-called strip or elimination, and yet there is probably no type of hand that is more frequently misplayed. Hands requiring the elimination of one or more suits occur with considerable frequency in almost in every session at the Bridge table.

An interesting example of a strip play occurred in a recent Duplicate game at Miami, Fla., the great winter resort of Eastern United States, in which Mr. Gerald Groesbeck, playing the South cards below, was the only person to make five-odd on a hand in which the method of play adopted by him was designed to assure a contract of four-odd against most possible East and West distributions.

East, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

	♠ A 9 3 2 ♡ 7 5 ◇ A 10 ♣ 10 9 8 6 3
♠ K 8 ♡ 10 8 4 ◇ Q 9 4 3 2 ♣ J 5 4	N W E S	♠ 7 6 ♡ Q J 6 3 2 ◇ K J 7 6 ♣ K Q
	♠ Q J 10 5 4 ♡ A K 9 ◇ 8 5 ♣ A 7 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♡	1♠	2♡	2♠
Pass

East's Opening bid of one heart was, of course, in the nature of a mild psychic, and South had the alternative of a Double rather than an immediate bid of a spade but reasoned that the vulnerable Overcall would secure free rather than forced information from his partner and that upon the basis of whether he responded freely or not South could determine how far the hand should go. Whether this reasoning was correct or fallacious, it succeeded in this particular case, and North of course gave a free Raise to the spade Overcall, whereupon Mr. Groesbeck bid four spades.

The Opening lead was the heart Ten, and when the Dummy was spread upon the table Mr. Groesbeck could count as possible losers one spade, one diamond and two clubs. The losers, of course, would be reduced, and the contract assured with a successful spade finesse, but South thought there was another method of play that gave a greater assurance of success against any probable distribution. This was the strip play, which must succeed if, after hearts and diamonds had been eliminated from both the open and closed hands, East could be put in the lead with a club and was unable to return that suit.

Acting on this plan Mr. Groesbeck won the first trick with the heart Ace, led a small diamond to the Ace in Dummy and returned a diamond, which was won by East with the King. East now returned a heart, which South won with the King. He led his last heart and ruffed in the Dummy. Hearts and diamonds were thus eliminated from both the open and closed hands. The next play was a small club from Dummy to the Ace, and when East played the Queen the success of South's strategy seemed to be assured unless, of course, East was falsecarding.

At this point the spade finesse was taken. West covered with the King, which was won by the Ace and a small spade returned, picking up all the adverse trumps. Now South led a club, which East was forced to win, but his hand now contained nothing but hearts and diamonds. He returned a diamond, which permitted South to ruff in Dummy and discard his last club, thus not only fulfilling his contract but making an overtrick.

Tomorrow's Hand.

East, Dealer.

East and West vulnerable.

	♠ 9 8 4 2 ♡ 9 ◇ A 7 6 5 4 2 ♣ 4 2
♠ J 7 ♡ 5 2 ◇ K 10 9 8 3 ♣ A 7 6 3	N W E S	♠ K Q 6 5 ♡ A K 6 4 3 ◇ J ♣ J 8 5
	♠ A 10 3 ♡ Q J 10 8 7 ◇ Q ♣ K Q 10 9

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

Prominent Chefs Use Beer Lavishly, Particularly for Sauces.

By Susan Mills.

CHEFS HEAVED a sigh of relief when repeal came in. Then plunged into the business of making good food taste better through the use of wines and liqueurs.

But they know, too, that beer has its place in the culinary scheme. From cook books of two of them we have recipes for dishes made with beer.

Here is a favorite recipe from Joseph Happle, chef at the Schroeder Hotel, in Milwaukee.

Fish Sauce.

5 ounces shallot onions, cut fine and braised

2 ounces gingersnap crumbs

1 stalk celery, finely cut, and parsley.

Put in a fish kettle the desired fish, add the onions, celery, gingersnap crumbs, parsley, salt. Cover the whole completely with a light bottled beer and cook slowly until done.

To prepare sauce, use the fish broth, cook it down to two-thirds of its volume and put thru a sieve, add 5 ounces of fresh butter, beat lightly and pour over fish when serving.

From a New York chef, Louis Ceres, of the Biltmore, we have this recipe for—

Veal Kidney Beer Sauce.

In a saucepen put a good piece of butter, when hot add four veal kidneys (cut in halves) saute them on both sides until nice and brown; add to it half a pound of chopped onions; when little brown, sprinkle over a tablespoon of flour. Stir a while and moisten with a bottle of light beer, add little salt and pepper, one bay leaf, one tablespoonful of brown sugar. Cook slowly till meat is tender, then place the kidneys on a platter in a hot place. Strain the sauce and pour over it very hot. Can be served with any vegetable or potatoes.

What Today Means

"Taurus."

If April 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 a. m., from 1 to 3 p. m., and from 10 to 11 p. m.

It may prove very advisable if on this date you will be cautious to avoid being abrupt in either your manner of greeting or of speech in both your social and business contacts. Do not make any definite engagement unless you are positive you can keep it, for should you fail to do so, there is a possibility of deep resentment being caused.

The woman born on April 27 will do well to force herself to take an active interest in social affairs, and to mix freely with people. Even if you do not feel inclined to go to the theater, or moving pictures, and accept invitations to social gatherings, you will find it decidedly beneficial if you exert yourself to do so. Make up your mind to take more interest in periodicals which deal with the economic and political issues of today, so you will be qualified to discuss them intelligently. By assuming a cheerful manner and evincing interest in people, your popularity will increase.

The child born on April 27, as soon as it is old enough, should be instructed in the evils that might result from the gulping down of food. Care should be exercised that it does not contract bad table manners. It should have impressed upon it, when young, how very important proper deportment at the table is, and that bad behavior when dining is something that can not be tolerated. Remember the grown-up person, as a rule, reflects the training received when a child.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

Hats Become Bigger, Flatter; Materials Gayer

Crowns Grow So Small They Are Almost Non-Existent.

New York, April 24 (AP).—Summer hats will be different from spring hats this year. They are growing bigger and flatter, and their material is becoming more varied.

"Cartwheels," they are called, and they are being shown in everything from beach and sport hats to street and formal hats for restaurant dining.

Crowns are becoming so flattened sometimes there isn't any. Elastic or velvet ribbon, worn in the back, holds these creations on the head. Sport or beach hats occasionally tie under the chin.

Synthetic straw is one of the favorite materials. Stitched taffeta, linen, and pique are being shown for warm weather wear. Hair hats in lacy weaves are appearing for formal occasions. Oddly enough, a new and striking favorite for sport hats is velvet velour in gay colors.

Beach hats have provided the designers with a field day. They are made of everything from bath toweling to oiled silk and leather. Some beach hats of straw are accompanied by good-sized straw beach bags.

Lacquered trimming is seen in flowers, bands, and piping. Field flowers are being used, sparingly, as trimming, and ribbon much less sparingly.

Veils appear often; not for use but just for fun. Some of them have chenille dots and are worn over the crown. Embroidered veils may cover an entire hat and the eyes of the wearer as well.

White, light blue, and scarlet are the new colors, accompanying the standard black, blue and navy. Light crowns with dark brims are sometimes seen.

An afternoon hat of a white organdy-and-hair weave has sprays of poppy buds draped across the front of its almost nonexistent crown. Another, which does not even pretend to have a crown, is called a "plateau," is made of hair lace, and is tied in the back with velvet ribbon.

A street hat of stitched taffeta has the brim faced with pastel-colored straw. It is adorned only with a metal buckle. For spectator sports wear, a cartwheel sailor of black leghorn is trimmed with twisted wire ribbon and a cluster of gay little lacquered flowers.

Spring Fever Serious Thing, Medico Says

An attack of spring fever may be something more serious than an excuse to go to the ball game.

The disease is as real as mumps and measles, recent medical research has revealed, and should be treated with irradiated cod liver oil and sunshine.

Dr. Joseph T. Smith, of the Academy of Medicine at Cleveland, defined spring fever as "a condition in which the body's stores of calcium are depleted."

"Capacity for work is lowered," he says, "physical fatigue easily occurs and the patient's liability to disease is increased."

Dr. Smith points out a drop in the amount of calcium in the blood of normal persons occurs in the winter months. He adds:

"As the sun rises higher in the sky with advancing spring, in some way its strengthening ultra-violet rays correct this calcium deficiency.

"Whatever the method of their action, it seems ultra-violet rays are the natural stimulus of that great metabolic organ formed by the living cells of the epidermis. Scientific evidence thus adds its weight to the natural inclination to shut up the shop or office or school early and get out into the spring sunshine."

Of a Feather.

It well may be that birds of feather
Fly in company.
You may have seen them flock together:
Judge accordingly.

But though a bird may know his brothers,
Born as he was born,
He may not circle with the others
If his wings are shorn.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie Tells How He Met Jay Bird

That was a sure-enough supper that Bettie Bear had for Blackie and his friends that night. Lots and lots of blackberries grow in the mountains, and Bettie always canned a lot of them. Blackie brought in Mr. Man's flour and sugar and Bettie made blackberry pies and biscuits. And she cooked some of the deer and made lots of nice gravy. There was so much company that Benny and Jenny had to eat at a side table, and the way they did eat that deer and biscuits and gravy was a sight. When Blackie saw the way they ate he said it was no wonder they had grown so much since he left home. Bettie had been so busy cooking supper that she hadn't had time to ask Blackie anything about what he had been doing down in the low country. So now that they were all seated at the supper table she asked him to tell her all about everything.

"Well," said Blackie, "I guess the first thing to tel you is what I did the day I left home. You know, Bettie, that you always said I was a bit lazy and would rather ride than walk. I reckon you were about right; and that day when I started down the mountain I certainly did wish I had something to ride. When I got down to the creek there was so much water in it because of a big rain that fell the day before that I wouldn't cross it without taking big chances of getting drowned. I stood there for a while and wondered how I would ever get on the other side where the bank was smooth and better for traveling.

Ah, a Nice Big Log!

"All sorts of brush and sticks and things were floating by on the water, and I just wished that a boat would come by. Well, while I was wishing for a boat I saw a great, big log coming along. That was the next best thing to a boat, and so I jumped on it, and away I went swish-swashing down the creek. Sometimes the creek was pretty crooked, and the log would bob all about and nearly throw me off, but I stuck my claws in and held on. I got pretty wet, but that wasn't near as bad as walking. After a while I thought I would crawl farther up on the log to where there were some big knots that I could hold on to. When I got up there I found a great, big hole in one of the knots, I wanted to know what was in there, so I stuck my paw in to feel around. And what do you think I struck? Honey! I never saw so much of it in my life, and there wasn't a single be in it. Think of a whole log full of honey!

"But there was only the hole to get it out through, and I was wishing that the hole had been a little bigger, when a bend in the creek threw my log right hard against a big tree and broke the log in two right at the hole where the honey was. That threw me into the water, but I grabbed one end of the log and pulled it to the land. Well, for once in my life, I had all the honey I wanted, and I came mighty near eating enough to make me sick. It did make me mighty sleepy, and so I lay down and took a good nap.

Wakes and Sails Again.

"When I woke up it was getting away long in the afternoon, and I still hadn't gotten out of the hills, so I pushed my log back into the water and climbed on it, and away I went sailing down the creek. I rode that log a long way, and after a while when the sun was getting mighty low I got clear out of the mountains, and so I thought I would stop and camp for the night. I jumped off the log and climbed up the bank of the creek, and just then I heard somebody say: "Hello, Blackie; what are you doing down here?" Well, I didn't know whether to be scared or happy to find somebody that knew me; but before I would decide just what to do, down flew Jay Bird and began talking to me. He told me that he knew all about the nice house in the big tree, and took me to it. So that's how I met Jay Bird."

Then Jay Bird said: "Well, Mrs. Blackie, I want to tell you that nobody ever made as many friends as Blackie did in the low country. He hasn't told you anything about it, and so I'm going to tell you. He hadn't been down there but a few months before all of the animals got together and made him king of the creek, and so tonight you have with you not only your husband, but King Blackie Bear, of Bear Creek."

It had taken Blackie so long to tell about his trip that they said they wouldn't hear from anybody else tonight. And they all went to bed.

The Latter Began Practice During the Intolerant Nineties

She and Another Pioneer, Emma Gillett, Opened a Law School With Three Women Students—Now It's the Washington College of Law.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

A VICTORIOUS GENERAL was never accorded a more enthusiastic reception than that planned for Judge Florence Allen, who will arrive in Washington tomorrow as honor guest of Kappa Beta Pi, international legal sorority.

The first woman ever appointed to the United States Court of Circuit Appeals, Judge Allen will be greeted by many of the country's great, who will gather to honor her.

She Acknowledged Debt.

And none will be more sincere in their praise than members of that little pioneer group of women lawyers whose resolute courage made her achievement possible. For the stumbling blocks which barred the road to success were not removed without Herculean effort; and in a recent letter to Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, pioneer Washington lawyer, Judge Allen acknowledged her debt to these trail-blazers. "I am a lawyer because you are a lawyer," she wrote Mrs. Mussey. "You were held up to me as an example."

Certainly the story of Ellen Spencer Mussey's struggle for success is inspiring. For in the 90s—which while gay and intolerant—this young girl in her twenties who started out to practice law to support her sick husband and four small children, needed more than a thorough knowledge of law; she needed courage, perseverance and good friends.

Yesterday, Mrs. Mussey, now a gentle white-haired lady, recalled her early struggles with tolerance toward those who were prejudiced and gratitude to those who aided her.

"I first studied law because my husband was ill and could not keep up his practice," she said. "I studied in his office because no law school would admit me. For, while Belva Lockwood had graduated from the National Law School, they seemed to think it a disgrace, would never admit it, and refused to take in any other women.

Asked Husband's Advice.

"I used to keep my husband on a cot in the back room of the office, and I would run in and ask his advice when a question came up I could not answer. After his death a special committee was appointed to examine me, and I was admitted to the bar in 1893. The other lawyers in the city were always courteous and considerate and treated me as one of them."

But Emma Gillett, who studied law about the same time, had no husband in whose office she could study, and had great difficulty in gaining admission to a law school. George Washington University refused to take her because the officials did not believe women had the "mentality to study law." She finally was graduated from Howard University, which prided itself on the fact that it "discriminated against no one because of age, sex or color."

Both Mrs. Mussey and Mrs. Gillett were so impressed by the lack of educational facilities for women who wished to study law they opened a law school with three women students. This school later became the Washington College of Law. It annually graduates more than 100 students, both men and women.

Since those early days women have forged ahead to high positions in the legal world. Today Washington has one of the most competent groups of women lawyers in the Nation. These women are outstanding both in criminal and civil law, and are advancing constantly in their profession. They have two strong legal organizations, the Women's Bar Association and the Portia Club.

Another of the Prominent.

Prominent among the women lawyers of this city is Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt, who was appointed Assistant Attorney General in 1921, and served until 1929, under three Presidents. Since her resignation, she has been engaged in the successful practice of law in this city.

Pearl McCall and Rebekah Greathouse are the only two women who have served as assistant district attorneys in this city. At first many persons in the District were inclined to take the matter as a joke. And so certain was one newspaper Mrs. Greathouse would lose her first case they had the first edition on the streets with a banner head saying, "Woman Prosecutor Loses First Case." But the joke was on them when it was found that far from losing the case Mrs. Greathouse had not even been in court that particular day. Both she and Miss McCall had successful careers as assistant district attorneys, and today are engaged in private practice. Among other successful women lawyers in Washington who have devoted themselves entirely to private practice are Mrs. Bernita Matthews, Miss Olive Lacy and Mrs. Clara Graecon. Among those who have devoted themselves to the educational side of law is Mrs. Grace Hayes Riley, now dean of the Washington College of Law.

PWAP Removes Artists From Cobwebby Garrets

Although This Time-Honored Artistic Prop Was Passe a Few Years Ago, the Depression Brought It Back All Too Realistically.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

STARVING IN COBWEBBY GARRETS, long considered by a thoughtless world the inspirational prerogative of artists, had gone out of fashion when depression swooped down upon the Nation.

After months of acute economic distress, artists drifted back to garrets, cobwebs and empty cupboards. Just as they were wondering how they could hang on to the garrets, along came the Public Works of Art Project and gave them an opportunity to earn their living as well as a chance to do the work they wanted to do.

Landlord's Faith.

As 70-odd-year-old Artist Dewing Woodward expressed it, the work she did for PWAP not only restored her landlord's faith in her but her faith in herself.

Miss Woodward, who lives in Coral Gables, Fla., is one of 526 women who have been employed by PWAP under the direction of Edward Bruce, administrator of the project, and Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, head of women's work for Federal emergency relief. In fact, the very first artist put on the PWAP pay roll was a woman—Elsa Driggs, of New York, landscape painter of note.

Most of the women artists who have worked for PWAP are in their twenties. Caught in tthe maelstrom of depression just as they had completed their art schooling, they had not had time to prove their ability or to build up a clientele. But with the experience and contacts gained through their labors for PWAP they are optimistic about the future, even though PWAP funds will not be forthcoming after May 1.

Miss Edris Eckhardt, of Cleveland, was earning $20 a month teaching a half-day weekly in an art school before she received a commission from PWAP to make ceramic sculpture of Mother Goose figures for the Cleveland Public Library. When the sculpture was shown in the Cleveland PWAP exhibit a week or so ago, slender, vivacious Miss Eckhardt received several inquiries about her work. She believes the inquiries will lead to commissions.

Worked Her Way.

In Washington to attend the National PWAP exhibition, the young artist told how she had worked her way through school by selling her sculpture and pictures.

"I got through just in time," she said yesterday. "If the depression had come while I was in school I could never have finished the course, even though I was living at home and had no rent to pay."

"Living at home" was the salvation of many young women artists before the coming of PWAP. It balanced the advantages of experience and clientele possessed by older women who were entirely dependent upon their own earnings. Under the onslaught of depression, experience meant little and clienteles were swept away.

Miss E. Fairfax Davenport, a cousin of James MacNeil Whistler, enjoyed an international reputation, had studied and won prizes in Europe and America, maintained studios in New York and New Orleans. She had adopted three children and was supporting an old friend of the family. Then the depression descended. Miss Davenport in her sixties, could probably have supported herself. But she could not provide for her little adopted family, even after giving up her studios. She was in Zellwood, Fla., when PWAP came to the rescue. Now she is directing and working on a series of murals for the civic center of Orlando, Fla. Orlando, thrilled with the beauty of the murals, has raised enough money to complete the work after PWAP funds stop.

Miss Dewing Woodward was given a commission for only two pictures, because the PWAP quota for Florida was crowded. But as a result of those pictures she was asked to exhibit ner silver-point etchings at a Miami hotel. An admirer of the exhibit asked her to do a portrait.

And so it goes. PWAP is destined to die on May Day. But it will live long in the hearts of women artists who have taken a new lease on life with PWAP funds and PWAP work.

Slim Women Not "Au Fait" In Duce's Italy

Milan, Italy, April 26 (U.P.).—Slimness in women was denounced as an "Anglo-Saxon fancy" in an article attributed to Premier Benito Mussolini, which appeared today in his newspaper Il Popolo D'Italia, chief Fascist organ.

Giving birth to children, the author of the article argued, was woman's "supreme elegance." It continued:

"Women should be buxom. Slimming practices result in ugliness rather than in beauty. This Anglo-Saxon fancy, fortunately rooted in Italy only a short time, has become now simply a memory. Our women have begun to understand that the supreme elegance granted woman by nature consists in giving birth to children and surrounding herself with a halo of maternity."

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Inaugurate Better Homes Week Tomorrow

ANOTHER IMPORTANT event will be added to the list of great occasions at the Girl Scout Little House on New York avenue when Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has tea there tomorrow afternoon. During her visit, which will inaugurate Better Homes Week in America, the Girl Scouts will demonstrate leisure time activities which can be carried on in the home.

The little house is the center of interest during Better Homes Week each year very properly, for it was the first house built when the Delineator Magazine began its better homes drive in 1922.

Built by the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the house was later donated to Girl Scouts, and since then has been a practice house where girls can prepare for responsibilities in their own homes. It is also shown to thousands of visitors who go to see how attractive a small, inexpensive house can be.

Mr. Donn Barber, the architect, modeled it upon the boyhood home of John Howard Payne, famous as the composer of "Home, Sweet Home." The interior has been adapted to provide the modern conveniences. Beauty, comfort and economy rule in this house.

This week many visitors, enthusiastic about the possibilities of the better homes project, will have their names placed along with many of the famous in the guest book at the little house.

In the past, President and Mrs. Coolidge, President and Mrs. Hoover, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. William Howard Taft, and many other notables, as well as Cabinet members, Supreme Court justices, and Members of Congress, have been visitors and enthusiastic admirers of the little House.

Indeed, many people feel the intense interest in the better homes movement is inspired by the beauties of the Girl Scout headquarters.

At the Polo Grounds one of the most picturesque sights was the group composed of Mrs. Winmill and her two attractive daughters. They came down from Warrenton and captured the first prize in the team fence-jumping contest.

Modern Woman Accused Of Leading Double Life

Founder of Barnard College Isn't Too Complimentary, But Is Glad Women Are Returning to the Home Where They Belong.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

An athlete by day, she is a healthy animal, capable of competing against anybody. By night she becomes a Victorian, with a wasp waist, a trailing skirt and an attempt at a mincing step which she can't negotiate.

These are opinions of Mrs. Annie Nathan Meyer, founder and trustee of Barnard College, who has been in Washington to visit relatives and in interest of establishing a Barnard Alumni Association.

"The modern woman's Victorian manner is, however, usually completely spoiled by the cigarette which hangs from her lips," Mrs. Meyer said yesterday at the Dodge Hotel. "In fact, as a Victorian, the modern woman is a failure so far as external appearances are concerned."

Mrs. Meyer pointed out, however, that underneath this modern woman is one truly old-fashioned, with the domestic urge pushing her other interests aside. This, she thinks, is a reaction against the aims and ideals of the woman of a decade ago.

"I have noticed this reaction," she asserted, "among the Barnard students, who are typical of normal girls. It is being manifested in longer skirts and in the recurrent popularity of the graces. In older women it is shown in a different, but just as definite way. For instance, they no longer have great admiration for the woman who has a job. They are beginning to realize woman's best sphere is, after all, in the home."

In substantiating this, Mrs. Meyer declared they are waking up to the fact the home provides the perfect career for any woman.

"It offers an outlet for her intellect, her energy. It is a self-sufficient career. The old-fashioned idea of the home being gloomy and limited in its opportunities for self-expression is the bunk."

Mrs. Meyer pointed out 40 years ago a woman who wanted a career saw first of all her household duties were disposed of effectively.

"This woman," continued Mrs. Meyer, "had a ready reply for anybody who hinted she was neglecting her home in favor of her advanced ideas. It was, 'go home, ladies, and look in my ice box.' A clean ice box was sufficient proof her home duties were discharged."

Mrs. Meyer discredited the idea women had forged ahead because of their superiority.

"They are not superior to men," she said. "For instance, the prevalent belief that they have higher moral standards than men have a false basis. Take smoking, for example—women smoke anywhere, without regard for anybody's feelings. I heartily agree with the man who said, 'If women would only smoke like men.' Furthermore, I firmly believe if women were subjected to the same temptations, they would probably succumb as quickly as men."

Virginia Silk Workers Plan Walkout Today

State, Federal Conciliators Reach Buena Vista to Seek Peace.

Buena Vista, Va., April 26 (AP).—Representatives of the State and Federal Labor Departments arrived here today to attempt conciliation measures in a strike of employes of the Majestic Silk Mills, scheduled for tomorrow. They reached Buena Vista as D. M. Chaplin, president of Local No. 2030, International Textile Workers, said that 150 of the plant's 200 workers were prepared to quit work and begin picketing the plant.

With that definite announcement of the workers' plans, John Hopkins Hall, State commissioner of labor, announced in Richmond that he had sent Chief Inspector S. A. Minter here to represent the State labor department. Commissioner Richardson, of the United States Department of Labor, also was sent here, Mr. Hall said. Another labor official here is John A. Chumbley, representative of the National Labor Board.

Mr. Hall said that none of the State or Federal representatives had definite plans, other than to aid in whatever way possible in any moves for conciliation.

Employes at the Majestic plants have decided definitely to strike, Charles J. Hughes, president of the Virginia Federation of Labor, said.

"When workers insist that union men are being discharged because of their affiliation with the union, that rates of pay have been reduced and that working conditions are unsatisfactory, there is little else to be done except let the men strike," he said. The federation head said that the strike decision was reached earlier in the week.

Charges by the union local that union men had been discharged because of their organization connections as well as that a spread-out system had resulted in more work per weaver and a cut from $1.25 to 95 cents per 100,000 picks in the pay rate were denied by Jack Butson, plant superintendent.

He said that instead of laying off 30 workers, as Chaplin said, the change had actually resulted in the employment of more workers. He said they were getting from $3 to $5 per week more pay.

He said that some time ago two union men were laid off, but that this was caused by the shift to the new system, and not because of their union affiliation.

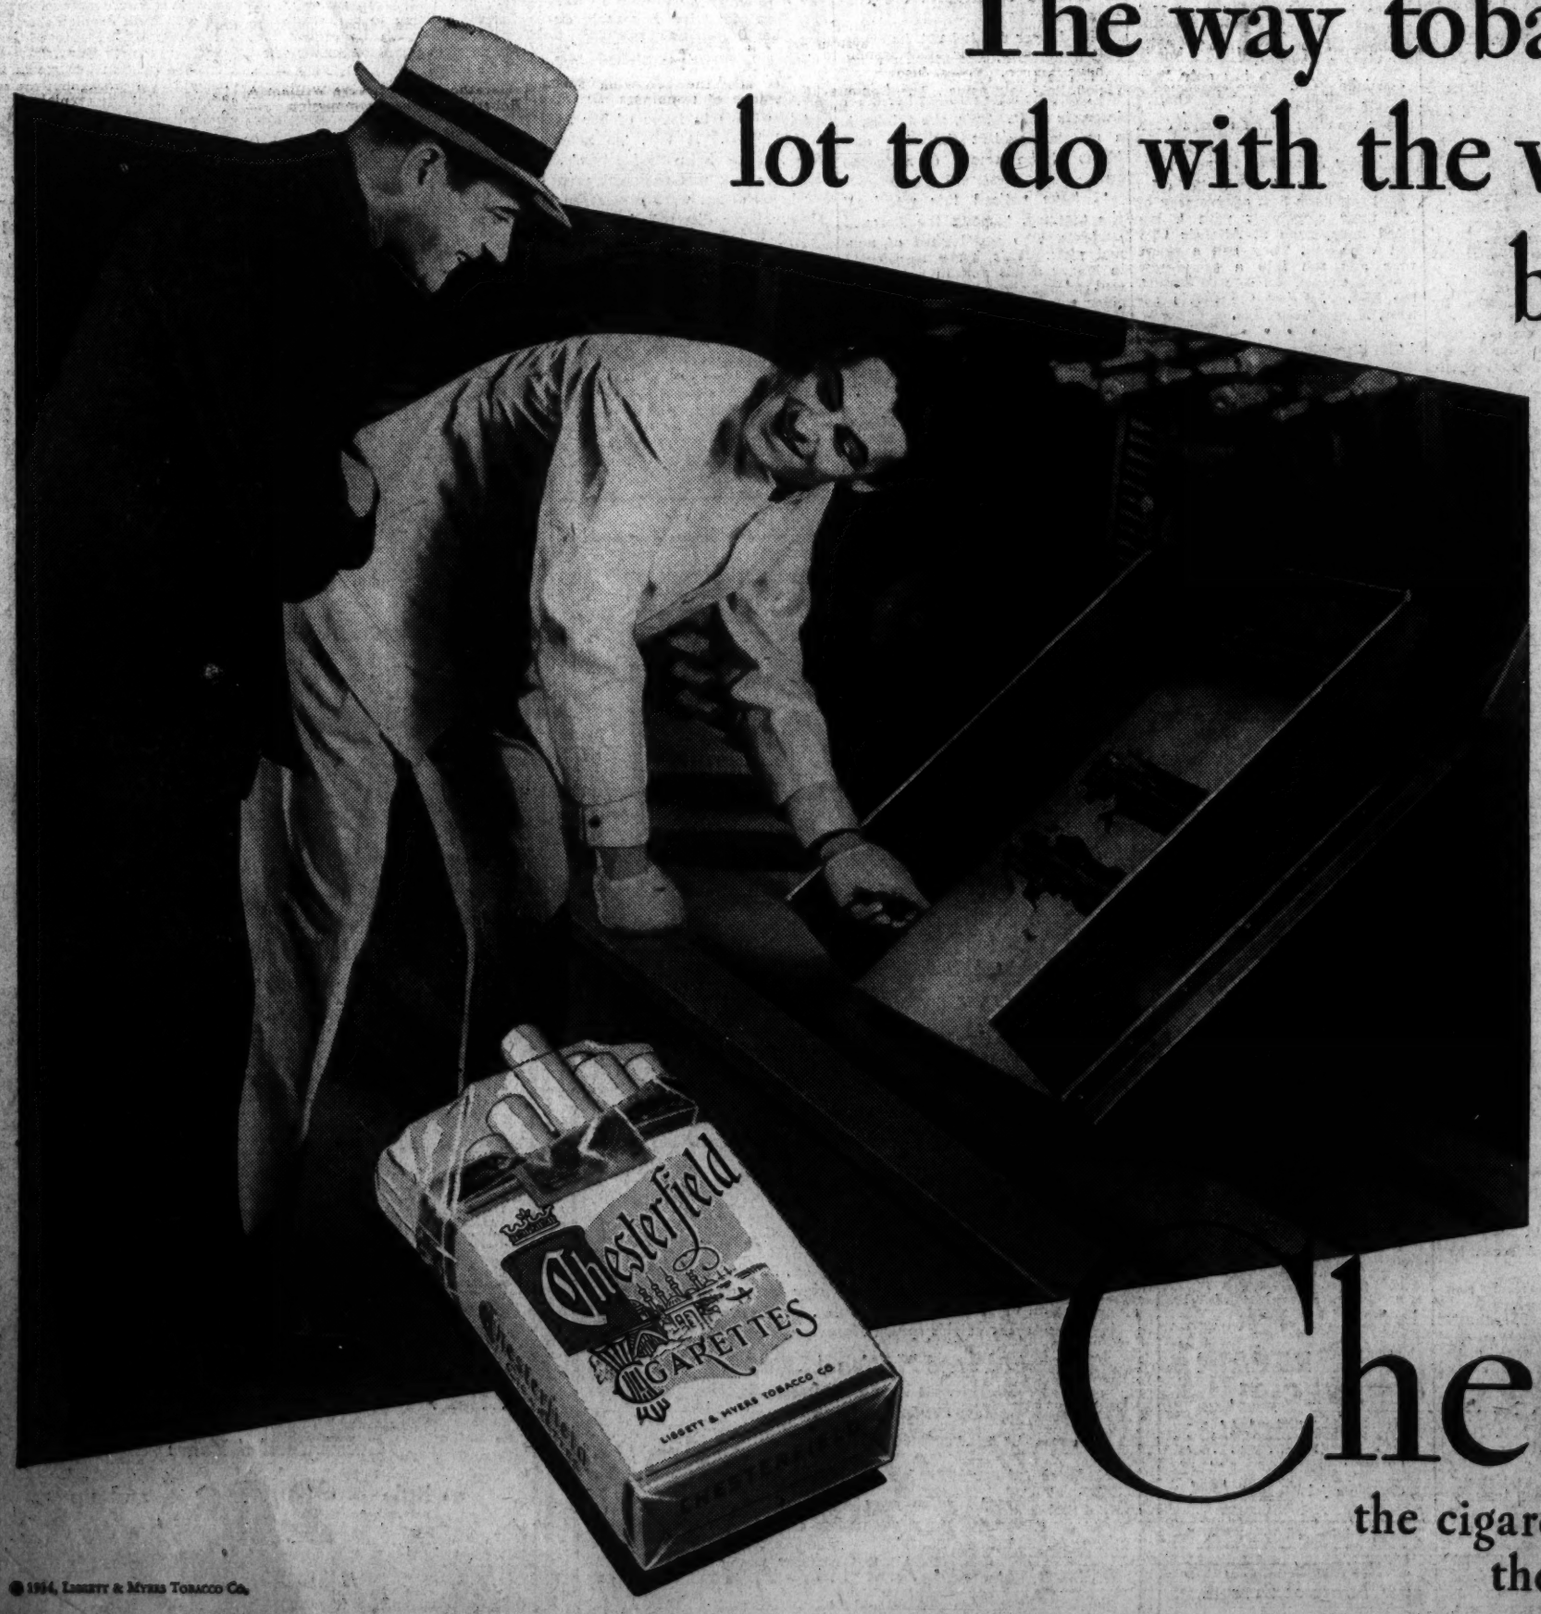
The way tobacco is cut has a lot to do with the way Chesterfield burns and tastes



There are many different ways of cutting tobacco.

A long time ago, it used to be cut on what was known as a Pease Cutter, but this darkened the tobacco, and it was not uniform.

The cutters today are the most improved, modern, up-to-the-minute type. They cut uniformly, and cut in long shreds.

The tobacco in Chesterfield is cut right—you can judge for yourself how Chesterfields burn and how they taste.

Peace Elusive In Auto Trade

Detroit, April 26 (AP).—Proceeding carefully and avowedly without hopes of immediate results, the National automobile labor board today continued its search for a permanent solution of the automobile industry's labor troubles.

Dashing hopes for an overnight settlement of strikes and disputes that threaten to flare into walkouts in five Fisher Body Corporation plants—hopes that had been buoyed up by an optimistic statement from Gen. Hugh S. Johnson in Washington—Dr. Leo Wolman, chairman of the automobile labor board, warned today that quick results should not be expected.

"A situation that has obtained for months can not be changed in a day," Wolman said.

Recognition of the American Federation of Labor is the sticking point in the Fisher Corporation's disputes with employes in its Cleveland, St. Louis, Kansas City, Janesville, Wis., and Tarrytown, N. Y., plants.

The board let it be known that it considers the situation in Cleveland, where Fisher employes estimated to number as high as 8,000, actually are on strike, as the focal point of the widespread disputes.

Claw Machine Declared Legal In Court Test

Jury, After Deliberating Half Hour, Says Skill Rules Game.

A Police Court jury, after deliberating for half an hour, decided yesterday that "claw" machines are within the law and not games of chance as the District contended.

Two Washington restaurant proprietors, William W. Wakefield and James Jawish, defendants in a "test" case before Judge Isaac R. Hitt, were acquitted on permitting gaming charges.

The jury's verdict followed three days of legal arguing, machine demonstrations, candy eating and much good natured bantering on the merits and demerits of "winning something for nothing."

In final instructions to the jury, Judge Hitt pointed out that to permit gaming a person must allow other persons to "bet and wager money in, on or at his establishment." He added that a demonstration of "claw" devices in open court was the best evidence.

He left it to the jury to decide which predominated—skill or luck. Each member of the jury wore a broad grin when the foreman pronounced the defendants "not guilty."

The "test" case was ordered by District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett.

Pending outcome of the case, machines throughout the city have been labled "out of order." They are now free to operate unless further action is taken by the District Attorney.

VERA Will Place Indigent Families On Farming Land

Richmond, April 26 (AP).—"A place in the country" which, if it will not supply luxuries, will at least solve the depression problem of "when—and what do we eat?" for approximately 500 Virginia families, is the goal before Sidney T. Adair, Virginia assistant emergency relief administrator.

Under the title "Subsistance Farming Program" the VERA plans to take families, stranded by hard times and unemployed or unemployable in urban areas of the State, and send them back to the land. Five hundred families, five to each county, is the approximate quota for the State.

Each of the families chosen, will receive a small farm with expenditures of approximately $700 made to adapt the tract to living and working conditions. Surplus cows and hogs may be secured from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, and tools and other needs supplied. The property and its equipment will not be given outright to the farmer and his family, but will be a loan. Facilities for the purchase of the farm and equipment, however, will be given through work on relief projects.

Allen Opposes Kelso as D. C. Welfare Chief

Confirmation Will Be Refused; Aid Funds Paid for April.

With the nomination of Robert W. Kelso as director of the District Board of Public Welfare meeting with disapproval by Commissioner George E. Allen, Elwood Street, director of the Community Chest, looms large as the probable successor to George S. Wilson, who is soon to retire.

This was disclosed after Commissioner Allen conferred yesterday with Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and received a grant of $200,000 for April needs. Original funds were exhausted last week.

Although there has been no formal action by the Board of Commissioners on the nomination of Kelso by the Welfare Board, it appeared certain that Kelso's name will be rejected. Welfare problems are controlled by Allen, and Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and John C. Gotwals are not disposed to interfere with his responsibilities.

Just what effect the rejection of Kelso will have on the already strained relations between Allen and the Welfare Board was uncertain. Allen has previously indicated that he will continue to reject every nomination until the man he desires is presented.

The Welfare Board has not manifested any particular pleasure at the plan of Commissioner Allen to divest it of its authority over welfare affairs and to relegate it to a mere advisory unit.

Should any impasse be reached between the Welfare Board and the Commissioners, Allen plans to retain Wilson until legislation is passed to vest full authority over welfare affairs in the hands of the Commissioners.

Elwood Street is the most favored of all other candidates. Commissioner Allen believes he is the outstanding man available, since William Hodson, director of emergency relief for New York City, is not receptive. Sweet is a local man, while Kels has spent most of his time in Boston and St. Louis.

The purpose of Commissioner Allen's visit to Hopkins' office was to discuss additional relief funds and to determine whether Kelo met with his approval. After the conference, Commissioner Allen said Hopkins had no interest in the nominee for Wilson's post.

Commissioner Allen yesterday notified Hopkins that the relief neds of the District for May would be $1,000,000. The April estimate was for $800,000, but this was $200,000 short of the actual needs.

Captive Whimpers As Police Seek Kidnap Solution

Kansas City, April 26 (AP).—Whimpering to his captors of "persecution" by the law, Max Chipman, wanted in Boston for kidnaping and in New York for questioning in a murder, today refused to waive extradition to the East.

Sheriff Thomas B. Bash said necessary extradition papers would be requested at once. Chipman retained a lawyer to fight removal.

Sought by Boston police since the abduction of Herman P. Rutstein, October 11, 1932, he was arrested here last night as he worked as a dice table croupier in a night club.

Detective Lieut. George V. Augusta and Detective Joseph Decker, both of Boston, aided by Federal and Kansas City officers, trailed Chipman to his nocturnal hangout.

More Power For District Board Voted

Foreclosure Measure by Sen. King Also Given Approval.

Increased powers are given the District Commissioners under terms of a bill which the Senate District Committee yesterday authorized Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, sub-committee chairman, to report favorably to the Senate.

Senator Hamilton F. Kean (Republican), New Jersey, urged enactment of the measure, saying to the Commissioners, who were present:

"I'm in favor of giving you plenty of authority and holding you responsible."

"Fine," said Commissioner George E. Allen, "that's what we want. We want to be held responsible for what we do."

The bill is designed to relieve Congress of some of the functions it now must exercise as a town council. It makes no radical change in existing law, but empowers the Commissioners to authorize opening of graves, closing of certain streets and alleys under certain conditions, and such things.

King Bill Approved.

Favorable report was voted by the committee on the King foreclosure bill, which has been in charge of a sub-committee, and Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, was directed to make the report. The bill provides that foreclosure procedures must be initiated in the courts and prescribes a procedure to be followed by the courts which would require not less than 90 days to complete.

The Thompson billl giving District juries discretion to impose life imprisonment instead of electrocution in first decree murder cases was pigeonholed. United States District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett opposed the bill.

The bill, already passed by the House, which would amend the District liquor law to permit more than one unit of a chain store system to have liquor licenses, also was indefinitely laid aside. The Commissioners opposed the bill before the House.

Hazen Opposes Bill.

The House bill permitting issuance of licenses to stores operating in residential areas under the nonconforming use clause of the zoning law, also was tabled. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said the liquor licenses might give an added value to the property, which was contrary to the spirit and purpose of the zoning law. Thomas S. Settle, of the Park and Planning Commission, recorded that body's opposition.

Dr. George C. Havenner, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, responding to a question from Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman, disapproved the bill, saying "the present system of granting liquor licenses to every kind of store asking for it is infinitely worse than the old-time saloon." A. C. Driscoll, president of the Midcity Citizens Association, also opposed the bill.

House Slashes In D. C. Budget Are Attacked

Witnesses Tell Senators Further Economy Will Injure Services.

Need for restoring their appropriations to the minima fixed in the Bureau of Budget estimates was emphasized before the Senate District appropriation sub-committee by representatives of the Public Utilities Commisison, the Public Library and the Recorder of Deeds at hearing before the sub-committee yesterday.

Work of the Public Utilities Commision would be severely hampered if the House figures were permitted to stand, Riley E. Elgen, vice chairman of the commisison, told the committee. The budget estimates were $86,823, but the House subcommittee cut this down to $50,000 and reduced personnel.

The $72,500 provided for the maintenance of the Public Library was absolutely necessary, Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian, said. This was slashed to $25,000.

Approval of the House provision of $150,000 for a branch library in Georgetown was urged by Dr. Bowerman. The House committee inserted this item, although the Budget Bureau refused to approve it.

The committee will resume hearings at 10:30 a. m. today.

The committee has already been furnished transcripts of the high school records of competitors, many of whom are honor students.

Judge Weighs Phone Cut After 4 Days of Talk

Thousands of Words and Scores of Briefs Entered in Rate Fight.

A record of some sort was attained in District Supreme Court last night with the conclusion of arguments in the battle of the Public Utilities Commission to reduce telephone rates here 10 per cent.

Attorneys representing on the one side the commission and on the other the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., consumed four court days in telling Justice Jesse C. Adkins what he should do.

Justice Adkins said he would take the case under advisement and render his decision after he had digested the verbal arguments and scores of pages of written briefs.

The attorneys who established the "marathon" record were William A. Roberts, for the commission, and George P. Hoover and R. A. Van Orsdel for the phone company. On the success or failure of their arguments rests the rate to be paid by practically every telephone user in the city. The reductions proposed by the commission run as high as 10 per cent to certain classes.

Prior to the closing arguments many days had been spent introducing evidence as to valuation and depreciations.

12 Church Choirs Rehearse Tonight

Three Festival Concerts to Be Given Next Week.

Members of the 12 choirs participating in the festival of religious music to be given Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights of the coming week will meet this evening in the First Congregational Church with Dr. Hans Kindler to rehearse the numbers for the concluding concert in conjunction with 60 members of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Prior to Dr. Kindler's rehearsal, the two directors selected to conduct the combined choirs in the closing numbers at the Monday and Tuesday concerts will rehearse their groups. Norton M. Little has been selected to conduct the finale Monday night, with Claude Robeson at the organ. Tuesday, Justin Lawrie will conduct, with R. Deane Shure as organist.

The festival consists of three concerts, the first two to be given by six choirs in the First Congregational Church, and the third in Constitution Hall by the 12 choirs and orchestra.

Trade Bodies Today Submit Parking Plan

Alternative to All-Day Ban to Be Offered Commissioners.

Impounding Cars That Violate Time Limit by Police Urged.

The alternative parking plan of Washington's trade bodies, drawn up by a special committee, has been approved by the executive committees of these organizations and will be presented to the District Commissioners this morning, it was learned last night.

Although secrecy continued to surround the nature of thep lan, it is understood to call for parking suspension for a brief period in the early morning and evening rush, resumption of one-hour parking during the remainder of the day and the establishment of 100 foot shipping points in the various blocks. Parking by vehicles doing business with the stores would be permitted in these reserved sections under the plan.

The committee, it also is understood, favors impounding of automobiles parked overtime. Under this plan, drivers who have left their cars parked overtime would have to call at precinct stations for their machines.

Merchants Opposed.

Although the merchants are unanimously opposed to the all-day parking ban, they are reported to be in favor of a certain amount of stringency, in order that traffic authorities may be given all possible aid in solving their problems. The alternative plan, in brief, according to reports, will be a compromise.

Municipal garages, operated at cost, were advocated yesterday by William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, as a means of meeting his recommendation for an all-night parking ban throughout the city. Mr. Van Duzer gave assurance that the all-night parking ban would not be put into effect immediately throughout the city.

If the regulation is put into operation, it will not be done until after July 1, and then in limited areas, he said. It would probably be four years before the ban would be put in operation throughout the city, he added. This, he explained, would enable car owners to adjust themselves to conditions before the regulation goes into effect.

Hazen's Mind Open.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen indicated yesterday that if the alternative plan of the trade organizations gives adequate evidence that the all-day ban has hurt business, that he will look with favor upon the demands that it be suspended.

Mr. Van Duzer, on the other hand, refuses to be convinced that the ban has hurt business and is determined to have it continued for the 30 days originally prescribed.

Sea Food Stores Protest Costers

Sale From Boats Unfair, Merchants Claim.

Restriction of the sale of seafoods from boats achored along the municipal wharf was asked of the District Commissioners yesterday by R. Clay Espey on behalf of the Washington Seafood Association.

The association pointed out that fish dealers who rent space at the fish market are having difficulty meeting competition of mongers who do not have to pay rental.

Early Eight-Run Lead Enables Revamped Nats to Trim Red Sox, 10-7

Boston's Five In 3d Finish Weaver

Harris, Boken, Travis, New Regulars, Start Attack in First.

Enemy Whittles Score to 8-7, but Two Runs Save Russell.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

THE NATS and their New Deal line-up went radical yesterday and won a ball game. Taking over the job because the regulars had been too conservative with base hits, Joe Cronin's New Dealers afforded instant relief to the stagnant run-making industry, created employment for three Boston pitchers and appropriated a 10-to-7 victory for the long-suffering Washington fans.

They were men of action, this New Deal line-up, confounding the Red Sox with a five-run splurge in the first inning and striking Lefty Bob Weiland again while the iron was hot for three more runs in the second inning, but the Red Sox had their moments, too, and it was anybody's ball game along about the middle.

Weaver Is Relieved.

Brain Truster Monte Weaver, late of the University of Virginia faculty, who had been entrusted by Manager Cronin with the pitching duties yesterday, was voted full power to coast home to the finish when the Nats presented him with an 8-to-0 lead in the first two innings, but he was so wantonly wasteful with this margin that his resignation was requested by Cronin in the third inning.

The more practical Jack Russell was appointed to pitch after the Red Sox had wheedled five runs out of Weaver in the third, and although he put down the rebellion it was a very squeamish victory.

The 5,000 in the stands, who settled back to see how big the score would be after the 18 Washington hitters in the first two innings had staked Weaver to his 8-to-0 lead, were first startled out of their complacence by the Red Sox's five-run spree in the third and then saw the situation become downright serious in the seventh when the Sox narrowed the margin to 8 to 7 with a two-run uprising against Russell.

Rally for Two Runs.

Staggered by this surprising comeback of the Sox, the New Dealers met the emergency with a two-run rally of their own against Rube Walberg that proved conclusive.

The face-lifting operation on the line-up of the Nats that Joe Cronin had performed the day before, brought instant results, with Dave Harris, Bob Boken and Cecil Travis rattling out three straight hits in that first-inning barrage against Weiland.

Heinie Manush and Joe Cronin set the New Dealers a noble experiment in that first inning with a double and a single against Weiland. With two out, the run production started in earnest, with Harris dropping a single in right, Boken pounding a single into center and Travis whacking a double into left-center over the unsuspecting head of Carl Reynolds, who had run in for the ball. When Moe Berg smashed a single into left, the Nats had their five runs for the inning.

Manush and Cronin blazed the way, too, for that three-run assault in the second. Heinie pounded the ball up against the right field fence, a yard from the top, for three bases, and Weiland was withdrawn from the game. Cronin met Walberg's first offering for a triple into right-center, where the lumbering Solters tried to make a shoestring catch, and Manush scored. Schulte larruped a single to center and Cronin scored. Walks to Harris and Boken filled the bases and Travis handcuffed Third Baseman Walters with a hot smash that scored Schulte.

All had been peace and quiet with Weaver until the third and he had three strikeouts to his credit, but his little dream world crashed down about his ears after two innings. Travis bungled Pinch Hitter Cooke's grounder, Bishop chiseled a walk and the irrepressible Werber doubled past Travis. Johnson lashed a single into right, the pesky Carl Reynolds doubled to left, Ferrell and Walters singled and the Sox had five runs before Russell retired Cooke for the third out.

Issues Walk to Morgan.

Russell staggered along with this 8-5 lead until the seventh when he led with his chin by issuing a walk to Morgan. Roy Johnson promptly smacked him for a triple and Solters' fly brought in the second run of the inning.

Matters were thus still precarious with the Nats, with Russell staggering to hold his one-run lead, but the lower end of the Nats' batting order delivered him from his misery in their half of the seventh. Travis smacked a right into left, and so did Moe Berg. Russell sacrificed 'em along with a bunt on the third strike and Joe Kuhel produced a solid single through short-stop that brought 'em both home.

The Sox went down fighting. Pinch Hitter Joe Judge bounced a single off Travis' glove with one out in the eighth, and then Jack Russell helped himself out of a gaping hole. Max Bishop rifled a grounder to Joe Kuhel, who whipped the ball to Cronin at second base, and it developed into a rare double play as Russell scurried over to first base to take the throw that snuffed out the last sign of Boston's life on base.

Virginia Tech, V. M. I. Meet On Track

Cadets Facing Busy Day at Lexington Tomorrow; Other Contests.

LEXINGTON, Va., April 26 (Spl.).—All V. M. I. teams will be busy Saturday, with three of the outfits performing on Alumni Field before alumni returning for the Easter dances. Varsity and freshmen track teams will entertain Virginia Tech, with the field events starting at 1 p. m. and the races at 2. A freshman baseball game, the first of the season, will follow with Greenbrier Military School.

The varsity nine will be on a trip into North Carolina, playing return games with Tarheel teams that were victorious earlier at Lexington. The Cadets will meet North Carolina State tomorrow and North Carolina on Saturday.

Close Meet Seen.

Varsity track teams of V. M. I. and Tech are expected to hook up in another close meet with the final results hinging on the last event. Last year's dual affair ended in a 63-63 tie, the second in the track series, which opened in 1918. Since that time the Cadets and Gobblers have tied, 0-0, in football, 5-5 in baseball and broken even in a pair of basket ball games.

V. M. I.'s hopes in the meet depend on such fine performers as Capt. Hill Wellford, who may add other events to the 440 and 880, in which he is undefeated this season; Bill Burruss, Walter Turner, and Marshall Milton, veteran distance runners; H. Gwynne Tayloe, sophomore sprint star; Temple Ryland, javelin star and shot putter, and other members of the squad who have been showing steady improvement.

Sophomore Battery.

The varsity ball players, with Catchers Dave Pitkethly and Bill Tyree on the crippled list, have put on desperate rallies in their losing games against Maryland and Virginia. Coach Raftery has uncovered a new sophomore battery in Bill O'Brien and Selden McMillin, and Irvin Smith and Alex Neal will also be ready for mound duty this week.

Jim Farley, Hansdell Pasco, Henry Read, Stuart Smith, and other freshman track men are expected to be in top form for their clash with the Virginia Tech youngsters.

Pitt and Harvey in Tie at 80 For Belle Haven Golf Medal

TWO manor Club golfers, Harry G. Pitt, winner of virtually every important invitation tournament in this section, and William J. Harvey, jr., always a constant threat in big events here, tied for the medal prize with scores of 80, each, yesterday in the two-day qualifying round of the Belle Haven Country Club invitation tournament.

Pitt and Harvey outstroked a field of 150 players, although their scores were nothing to brag about For the first time in the history of District invitation tournaments the qualifying round ended without a single participant breaking 80. The cosharers of the prize were exactly 8 shots from par for this tricky 6,391-yard layout.

Two strokes from Pitt and Harvey were Sidney Sharwood, Belle Haven champion, who tied with Craig McKee, of Indian Spring, at 82 the opening day; McKee, himself; Roger Peacock, Maryland State amateur titleholder; Martin F. McCarthy, of Columbia, and Jimmy Drain, of Washington.

The other qualifiers for the championship flight, which moves into the first round of match play today, are R. H. O'Malley, of Georgetown University, 83; Ted Rutley, of Beaver Dam, 83; C. S. Runswick, of Indian Spring, 84; Ralph Fowler, of Washington, 85; John Shorey, of Kenwood, 86; Arthur Urban, of Indian Spring, 86; Forest Thompson, of Kenwood, 87; E. J. Carver, of Manor, 87, and Hickman Greene, of Argyle, former Louisiana State University golf captain, 87.

Late in the evening four golfers, Greene, Carver, Thompson and Maury Fitzgerald, of Kenwood, had to play off for the last three places. Fitzgerald went out on the first hole after being ditched on his second shot and trapped on his fifth. Tommy Webb, jr., Washington; W. R. Stone, Indian Spring, and C. C. Brown also tied at 87, and were eligible for the play-off, but were not on the scene.

Tigers Win, Regain Lead in American

Sorrell's Arm, Greenberg's Bat Beat Chisox, 2-1.

Detroit, April 26 (AP).—Detroit's Tigers jumped back into first place in the American League here today trimming the White Sox, 2 to 1, with the help of Hank Greenberg's bat and Vic Sorrell's mighty arm.

The victory gave Detroit two of the three games in the Sox series. Sorrell went the route for the Tigers, giving only five hits, and never more than one hit in any inning. Gaston worked five innings for Chicago and gave six hits before he was relieved by Wyatt.

Greenberg hit a pair of doubles which figured in the scoring of Detroit's two runs. Uhalt scored the only tally for the Sox on a single by Luke Appling.

Zachary, Braves Shut Out Dodgers

Beaneaters Score, 2 to 0, to Win Fourth in Row.

Boston, April 26 (AP).—Tom Zachary, pitching with all the cunning learned in his years on the mound, got the better of the youthful Emil (Dutch) Leonard today and gave the Braves a 2-to-0 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers. It was Boston's fourth straight triumph.

The game was decided in the first inning when Buck Jordan walked and Wally Berger and Pinky Whitney followed with doubles. The rest of the contest was a mound duel in which each team finished with six hits. Zachary's only bad inning was the ninth when he loaded the bases with two out.

Davis' Homer Feature As Cards Score, 10 to 1

Pittsburgh, April 26 (AP).—A whistling seventh-inning home run off the bat of Catcher Virgil Davis, with two on base, ended a southpaw's pitching duel today and paved the way for the St. Louis Cardinals to win their second game of the season from Pittsburgh, 10 to 1.

Wild Bill Hallahan, for the Redbirds, and Big Ralph Birkofer had fought on almost equal terms until this blow, which sent the Pirates' pitcher to the showers.

Buster Mills, a rookie from Columbus, who was put into the shifted batting order by Manager Frankie Frisch in an effort to shake the jinx which has kept his team from winning a game since opening day, came through with two singles, a double and a triple in five times at bat.

Phils Finally Win, Beating Giants, 3-2

Collins Limits Champions to 5 Hits; Home Run by Allen Decides.

PHILADELPHIA, April 26 (AP).—After suffering seven consecutive defeats in one of the most dismal starts of any campaign on record, the Phillies came through with their first victory of the season, downing the New York Giants 3 to 2.

Fidgety Phil Collins, the veteran right hander, bore the burden of the victory, twirling five-hit ball and and only once allowing two hits in one inning. He was in trouble several times because of wildness, however, giving five walks.

Ethan Allen provided the winning punch in the sixth just after the Giants had tied the score for the second time. He clouted one of Fred Fitzsimmons' pitches into the left field bleachers for a home run, his third hit of the game. Previously he had driven in the first run in the opening inning, sending home Dick Bartell with a single.

Bartell Gets to Third.

Bartell got to third when Bill Terry dropped Travis Jackson's throw of his grounder for an error and the two batsmen who followed grounded out.

New York tied it up first on a pass to Mel Ott, Jackson's double and George Watkins' fly to right which allowed Ott to score from third. The Phils came right back to regain the lead in the same inning when Don Hurst crashed a double, took third on Allen's single and scored when Jimmy Wilson hit into a double play.

In the sixth the Giants collected their second and final run when Terry doubled and came home on Ott's single and a force play at second.

Gus Mancuso made his first appearance of the season behind the plate for the Giants in the seventh after Fitzsimmons had been lifted for a pinch-hitter. He came in to receive Herman Bell's delivery.

Candescent, Making First Start, Triumphs in Outstanding Havre de Grace Race

Litzenberger Rides Filly To Win

Bubblesome Second by Length; Favorites Have Poor Day.

By Walter Haight.

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, April 26.—In contrast to yesterday's brilliant program, this track offered a featureless card today. Perhaps the best offering of the day was the 5½ fourth race which drew a dozen 3-year-olds. It proved a 1934 coming out party for Candescent, a little filly from the barn of C. Willing Browne, jr.

In charge of the brilliant Apprentice Litzenberger, Candescent drove down the stretch to a length victory over Bubblesome, a 10-1 shot, with Crout au Pot a fast-closing third ahead of Postscript and the others. The filly, a homebred daughter of Canter—Papillon and well played, stepped the distance in 1:06 1-5.

Although the customers arrived under clear skies and a warm sun they stayed to shiver in the late afternoon as the clouds lowered and rain threatened.

Mantados Triumphs.

Maryland-foaled 2-year-olds met for supremacy in the 4½ furlongs of the opening event, and it saw the silks of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt carried to their first victory of the season when Mantados, ridden by J. Bejshak, scored a front-running triumph. Paying $10.60, the swift son of Rock Man took command of the situation at the start of the abbreviated dash and at no stage of the contest was he endangered by the speed of his opponents.

Favorite players recovered some of their losses when Miss L. C. White's veteran sprinter, Dornock, at prohibitive odds, captured honors in the 6 furlongs of the second event that attracted nine sprinters of ordinary grade. Jockey Raymond Workman rode his eighth winner of the meeting.

Trainer J. L. Roberts saddled his second consecutive victor when he tightened the girths on T. F. Sword's recent acquisition, Energetic Boy, for the 6 furlongs of the third number that was a split of the second event. Energetic Boy achieved his success in a hard drive.

Miss Morocco Winner.

Racing in the interest of J. E. Smallman, Canadian patron, for the first time after being acquired via the claiming route a few days ago, Miss Morocco raced to her third consecutive victory and kept her streak intact when she smothered her opponents for speed in the mile and 70 yeards of the fifth offering to score in hollow fashion.

The silks of F. A. Carreaud were borne to victory in the mile and a furlong of the sixth number when Dark Fey and the veteran Jockey J. Renick made up a winning combination. Coming from behind after racing along with the early pacemakers, Dark Fey challenged Belle Fille as the final furlong pole was reached and under steady pressure came out to score by a length and a half. Zembla landed into second place.

Syriac, from the F. Hayes stable, raced to his second victory of the meeting and proved a popular choice when he accounted for the final number in easy fashion.

Woodberry Netmen Win.

Woodberry Forest, Va., April 26 (Spl.).—Winning by the same score as they did yesterday against Staunton Military Academy, the Woodberry Forest tennis team overwhelmed Fork Union Academy today by the score of 6 to 1.

MELOY, a keen factor from the start, continued with good courage under strong handling. CAERLEON, in tight quarters early, secured racing room at the stretch turn, and then finished stoutly. WISE MONEY weakened badly when put to a drive. KALOLA had early foot.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANDESCENT, $13.80, $7.30, $4.80; BUBBLESOME, $10.40, $6.80; CROUT AU POT, $4.10.

CANDESCENT, hustled into a forward position in the early running, responded strongly when taken to the outside for the final drive, closed fast, and was up in the final 50 yards. BUBBLESOME, in the thick of contention from the start, fought it out with good courage in the final drive. CROUT AU POT worked his way up on the outside, and came resolutely at the end. POSTSCRIPT, forced to race 3 wide outside throughout, held on well in the closing issue. WILROB had nice early speed, but flattened out fast during the final test. SLIPPER KING showed a good effort, and appears ready for a hard race. HEROWIN, taken up shortly after the start, went wide thereafter, and closed a good gap. SOME GOOD stopped after a half-mile. ZIPALONG was taken up midway of the stretch. STEPBROTHER swerved to the outside when the break came and was away poorly.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and seventy yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:44½. Off at 4:45½. Winner, J. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS MOROCCO, $5.10, $3.30, $2.70; PRIMUTE, $6.30, $4.20; CHEROKEE SAL, $3.50.

MISS MOROCCO sprinted into an easy lead going to the first turn, was rated along until threatened at the stretch turn, was shaken up thereafter, and held PRIMUTE safe. Latter, a forward factor from the beginning, moved up with a rush swinging into the home stretch, but was unable to threaten in the final drive. CHEROKEE SAL, as usual slow to get going, circled her field and finished with good courage, after making a wide turn. LOFTY LADY made a stout effort in the last half-mile, but faltered after reaching a forward position. DAWNCHILD could not keep in contention. KINDACORN was never a dangerous factor. STAR QUEEN was rushed off her feet to force the pace after breaking slowly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good and fast from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:15. Off at once. Winner, F. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK FEY, $9.90, $5.50, $3.00; ZEMBLA, $6.10, $3.40; BELLE FILLE, $2.80.

DARK FEY, taken under light restraint in the early stages while on the outside of the leaders, moved up stoutly to race BELLE FILLE into submission, and then drew out steadily nearing the finish. ZEMBLA, slow to get into her stride, improved her position gradually, and then closed with excellent courage. BELLE FILLE, rushed hard going to the first turn, was used up racing with WORTHINGTON, and faltered under punishment. PERNICKETY made a determined effort midway of the final stretch, but hung during the closing stages. LIGHT BRELZE showed improvement, but was not good enough. WORTHINGTON began tiring after seven furlongs. MING SUN was never a factor.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:45. Off at 5:47. Winner, F. Hayes' br. g. (7), by Flying Ebony—Lexicon. Trained by P. E. Fitzgerald. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:39, 1:52 4-5.

HETMAN	111	8	8	8	8	8	8	8	J. Renick	57.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SYRIAC, $3.10, $3.20, $2.70; CHIEFS TROUBADOUR, $6.00, 15.70; KIBITZER, 34.40.

SYRIAC took command without effort when entering the back stretch, opened up a long lead when approaching the home stretch, and finished with speed in reserve. CHIEFS TROUBADOUR, slower than usual to settle in his stride, went to the outside in the last half-mile, and closed gamely. KIBITZER secured racing room between his field in the late stages, and came willingly for the final issue. MANNERISM went strongly in the early racing, but tired under punishment. HAPPY LAD was never a factor. CLOUDY DAY stopped badly. The others did not figure, and raced poorly.

Dear Al: Havre de Grace, April 26.

With two weeks left of the Maryland racing season, it is practically certain that each of the three courses will show a profit. Bowie ran into a poor grade of horses and bad weather, but came through with a small surplus, according to unofficial figures. Here, the betting is averaging over the $300,000 daily handle necessary to keep the track out of the "red." Last Saturday, the play flirted with the half-million mark and those in charge here expect an even larger intake this week-end. Pimlico has shaved everything for its meeting and with good weather should show a profit. Preakness Day should balance the budget.

BILL.

First race—Back Fence has been close in his last two efforts and has not had the best of racing luck. Clear sailing tomorrow would find this one hard to beat. Exhibit comes to this recommended by good trials and is dangerous. Rustic Joe scored at Bowie and may make a money appearance.

Second race—Doeskin ran well last out and St. Nick had all he could do to keep the filly away from a set of brackets. Off that performance, I'm putting the Starmount Stable representative on top.

Peedeeque threatened twice at a route and may appreciate this sprint to be close. Sequoia and Hacky H would move up in mud.

Third race—Quickly was not keen about the Bowie track. On a fast course here he may turn the tables on Black Target. Both are fit and ready and appear to have an edge over the others. Gloritone has worked well and holds some promise.

Fourth race—Bright Haven makes his first start of the year in this sprint and is reported to be a keen 3-year-old. He turned in some fine exhibitions late last season and may come right out of winter retirement to score. The Immortal II, the Irish champion of last year, showed little over at Bowie. Happy Go for the show.

Fifth race—Chips, Trillium and Lawless Lady appear best suited in this group. They are at the top of their form now and there is little to choose between them.

Sixth race—Sun Shadow, the big Runyon horse, is a fairly consistent sort. Likely to gather a purse here. Lacquer's last was an impressive win. In India came out to surprise the other day. A possibility here.

Seventh race—Rock Coventry, All Rowes and Southard is the way I prefer them in the final.

Gold Cup Race Slated Near Warrenton May 5

Warrenton, Va., April 26 (Spl.).—The Gold Cup race, Virginia's spring racing classic, will be run this year over the course on the Clover Croft and Elway estates, near here, on May 5.

One of the largest fields ever combined in the Old Dominion is expected if the present influx of entries for the thirteenth annual running of the noted event and for the other races to be staged in conjunction with it is maintained, Chaffriaz Lelong, secretary and treasurer of the Gold Cup Association, indicates.

Stocks Yield Early Gains in Selling Drive

Trading Is Influenced by Business News; Dealing, 1,684,125 Shares.

New York, April 26 (AP).—With commodities lower and bonds leaning a bit downward, stocks failed to do much with a spotty early advance today and ran into selling during the last hour, when the tape fell a few minutes behind. Volume rose to 1,684,125 shares.

Stocks seemed to pay attention to such news items as the dividend reduction by Consolidated Gas of New York, Secretary Hull's remarks about economic affairs and softer textile markets.

Also, the railroad wage agreement, though averting a possible strike and thus serving to clarify the industrial picture to some extent, means higher operating costs for the carriers, and this angle was presumably taken into consideration by traders and investors.

Mining Stocks Depressed.

Mining stocks were still depressed by weakness of silver futures—bar silver was steady—which reflects the waning hopes of those who once thought they saw prospects of additional legislation on behalf of that metal.

Coppers looked up for a time during the morning, as though to greet the new code with a rally, but they lost their luster. Phelps Dodge strengthened on word of an important new vein.

Rails also took a fling at higher levels when the wage announcement was made. Their progress, however, soon found its upper limit and at the close most of them were lower. Industrial Rayon and Celanese slumped. Consolidated Gas common, put on a $2 annual basis against $3 previously, lost more than a point, and other utilities dipped sympathetically.

Lower Bids Made.

Motors, steels, chemicals and foods encountered lower bids. Evans Products and Fox Film were strong. National Distillers, reporting $1.90 a share earned during the first quarter, as compared with 10 cents a year ago, was active, but finished unchanged.

On the basis of the 90-stock closing composite, the net change was a loss of 1.2 points.

Bethlehem Steel's report of a net loss for the first quarter of 1934 contrasted with a small profit in the preceding three months, was available long after markets had closed.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

This Week, for the First Time in Over Two and One-Half Years, All Federal Government Bonds Have Sold at Par or Better.

By Ralph West Robey.

Truly a milestone has been reached in the Government bond market this week. The Treasury 3s—the so-called Mellon 3s—have reached par for the first time. These obligations were floated in the fall of 1931. They went to a discount at once and under the pressure of liquidation in later months the price fell to the low 80's. On last Tuesday after a long gradual climb there were four bonds sold at 100. Later there was a slight reaction but at least temporarily we had a market in which all bonds of the Government were at par or better.

The immediate reason for these Mellon 3s reaching par, according to gossip in the street, and this particular kind of gossip has a fairly good record for accuracy, is that the Government itself has been buying in this issue. The statistical evidence of such a conclusion rests upon the fact that the yield of these particular obligations is out of line with that of other governments. Treasury 4s, for example, with a maturity of 1944-54, as contrasted with a maturity in the case of the Treasury 3s of 1951-55, yield almost 3¼ per cent. The 4¼s maturing in 1947-52 and the Treasury 3¾s in 1946-56, also yield the investor at current prices 3¼ per cent. At best, however, any such support by the Government as may have been in the market is of secondary importance. The real thing is the current condition of the money market.

A Billion of Excess Reserves Added Recently.

Within the last three months the excess reserves of our member banks have been increased by approximately $1,000,000,000. This has been accomplished partly by the heavy importations of gold resulting from the President having undercut the international value of our currency when he established the 59.06 dollar. The rest of the growth is largely to be accounted for through governmental expenditures.

As this gold and these Treasury funds have poured into our banks, the institutions have been under increasing pressure to keep their funds invested, for they already held some $500,000,000 of excess reserves before this great addition was made. Just how great this pressure has been can be appraised if it is recalled that, according to the proverbial calculation, such a volume of excess reserves would support a credit expansion of $15,000,000,000, or almost as much as the total loans and investments of the reporting member banks in the country.

As was to be expected, therefore, there has been a mad scramble among the banks for suitable ways to employ these surplus funds. Because of this interest rates on short term paper have been driven to the vanishing point. For example, in the New York market a few days ago bankers' acceptances were selling for ⅛ of 1 per cent—an incredible rate and one which probably does not even cover the routine expense incident to the handling of the paper. Call loans can not even be made at 1 per cent. Prime commercial paper is selling at 1 per cent and time loans currently are quoted at from ¾ of 1 per cent to 1 per cent.

Negative Yield Found On Bills and Certificates.

In parts of the short-term Government field interest actually completely has vanished. Today one can not buy a Treasury note or certificate with a maturity of less than six months that yields any interest. On the contrary, because of the preferred position their ownership will carry in future issues, they yield an appreciable negative rate.

In the long term market the reductions in interest rates have been much less marked. As a matter of fact when one considers the supply of lending power in this country the long term rates are high. The reason for this is simply that there still is some hesitancy on the part of both private and institutional investors to take bonds with a maturity beyond a few years. Gradually, however, under the influence of what are believed to be signs of a sound money policy in Washington more and more capital is going into long-term obligations. It is this that basically accounts for the fact that the Mellon 3s finally have reached par. In this sense the new high price marks a milestone in the improving credit position of the United States Government.

Bond Market Points Lower In Profit Sales

Secondary Groups Blamed in Losses; Trading Cut to $14,357,000.

New York, April 26 (AP).—Interest in bonds lagged today and prices, especially in the secondary groups, pointed moderately lower.

The unsettlement of both commodities and stocks was thought to have brought profit taking in a number of semispeculative issues which have been recording "new highs" in recent weeks. Highest grade loans were fairly steady throughout.

The trading volume dwindled to a total of $14,357,000, par value, and the average for 60 domestic corporate bonds was off two-tenths of a point at 87.7.

Rail Wage Agreement.

The rails did not appear particularly enthusiastic over the compromise wage agreement reached at the conference of carrier managers and union officials at Washington.

While small gains were held by some bonds of Alleghany Corporation, Santa Fe, Chesapeake & Ohio, Northern Pacific and Pennsylvania, losses of fractions to a point or more were suffered by liens of Wabash, N. Y. Central, Illinois Central, Great Northern, Colorado & Southern, St. Paul, Chesapeake Corporation, and Baltimore & Ohio.

Declines of around a point or more were shown by issues of American Rolling Mill, American Water Works, Certain-Teed, International Cement, International Hydro-Electric, International Paper, International Telephone, Laclede Gas, Postal Telegraph and Utilities Power & Light.

On Gaining List.

Moderate advances, however, were registered by loans of Warner Bros., U. S. Rubber, Sharon Steel Hoop, Gulf States Steel, Dodge Bros., Crown Zellerbach and Chile Copper.

German government obligations rallied 1 to around 3 points on renewed hopes that the Reich would maintain interest payments on the Young and Dawes plan loans. Japanese issues also came back a point or so. Bonds of Dutch East Indies, Argentina and Belgium reacted 1 to 3 points.

U. S. Government securities were dull and slightly lower. Investors appeared to be withholding further extensive commitments in the Federal group pending the Treasury's next move in its refunding program.

Curb's Prices Decline Under Selling Rush

Nearly All Categories Hit in Losses; Trading Up to 300,000 Shares.

New York, April 26 (AP).—The curb market gave ground under selling pressure today. Practically all categories yielded, but losses were somewhat more pronounced among the miscellaneous list.

Initial dealings were fairly steady, but around the noon period light offerings made their appearance. In the last hour selling became more active. Declines of fractions to around 2 points were general.

Ford of Canada B was an isolated firm spot, moving against the trend for a 4-point advance. Standard Oil of Indiana, Electric Bond & Share and Cities Service were resistant.

Dow Chemical dropped 3 points, while Bunker Hill & Sullivan lost 4 in a nominal transfer. Charis Corporation, Aluminum Co. of America, Natomas Co., Schiff Co. and Sherwin Williams lost around 2 each. Losses of about a point or more were registered by Hiram Walker, American Gas & Electric, Hollinger Gold, Lake Shore, Pan-American Airways, A. O. Smith, Gulf Oil, Tubize Chatillon, Waco Aircraft and Swift Internacional.

Transfers approximated 300,000 shares, compared with 215,000 yesterday.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Dullness prevailed on the stock exchange today pending settlements and developments abroad. Oil shares were supported on dividend hopes, while Japanese bonds and a few industrials hardened. Other sections were generally easier. The market closed irregular.

Paris—The slump in electric shares caused prices on the bourse to react heavily. Suez and Royal Dutch issues were exceptions, the latter advancing on London buying. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—The increasing demand on the bourse brought on more active trading today. The closing was firm.

U. S. Exports In March Gain $27,000,000

Favorable Trade Balance in '34 Increased to $99,260,000.

United States foreign trade was shown by Department of Commerce figures yesterday to have increased more than seasonally in March, when exports gained $27,000,000 and imports $25,000,000 over February.

Exports were $190,000,000 compared with imports of $158,000,000 to give a favorable balance of trade of $32,000,000, compared with a favorable balance of $13,155,000 in March last year.

The Commerce Department said a considerable part of the gain in both exports and imports was attributed to the greater number of days in March than in February and to the usual increased movement of trade in this period.

Exports Value Increases.

The value of exports, however, ordinarily increases about 11 per cent from February to March, while this year the value increased 17 per cent. General imports, which usually increase about 12 per cent, were 19 per cent greater in value.

The more than seasonal gains brought the adjusted index of export values to 50 per cent of the 1923-25 average, the highest point since July, 1931. Imports were 44 per cent of 1923-25 average, the highest, with one exception, since December, 1931.

Exports for the first three months of 1934 were $525,029,000, compared with $330,119,000 in the first three months of 1933. Imports in the first three months this year were $426,169,000, compared with $274,614,000 in the same period last year.

Favorable Trade Balance.

The Nation's favorable trade balance for the first three months this year was $99,260,000, compared with $55,505,000 in the same period last year.

Exports of gold in March were $44,000, compared with imports of $237,612,000. In March, 1933, exports were $28,123,000 and imports, $14,948,000.

Gold imports exceeded exports by $237,568,000 in March this year, compared with an excess of exports of $13,175,000 in March last year.

1934 Gold Imports.

Total gold imports so far this year were $692,181,000, compared with $173,824,000 in the same period last year. The excess of imports so far this year was $687,371,000, compared with an excess of imports of $124,166,000 last year.

Exports of silver in March were $665,000, against imports of $1,823,000, to give an excess of imports of $1,158,000. Exports in March last year were $269,000, compared with imports of $1,693,000, to give an excess of imports of $1,424,000.

Silver exports so far this year were $7,554,000, compared with $4,311,000 in the same period last year. The excess of imports so far this year is $5,286,000, compared with $2,282,000 in the first three months of last year.

Interest Rates on Investments Depend on U. S. Credit Policy

By Anna P. Youngman.

The statement that the investment rate of interest depends upon the demand for and the supply of "capital" is a conventional formula which throws no light whatever upon the actual processes by which interest rates, both long and short term, are determined in a modern credit economy. Interest is the price paid for the use of purchasing power over a period of time. If the borrowed purchasing power is used to buy machinery, and fixed productive equipment, the loan is usually made for a relatively long period. If the borrower wants funds with which to convert raw materials into products for immediate sales, he will enter into a short term loan contract. But the line of demarcation between investment demand and commercial demand can not be sharply defined while the uses to which borrowed funds may be put are legion.

The supply of "capital"—that is, the funds available to meet demands for loans—is likewise not easily classified. Saved income of individuals, for example, may be used to finance long term investment operations, but that is not always the case. Moreover, bank credits available for long term investment employment as well as for short term commercial use can be varied in volume in accordance with the credit policies followed by modern banking managements.

Hence the question of the future of long term interest rates presents a problem very different from the familiar, curiously unrealistic conception of a market in which supply of material capital goods and a demand for such goods are relatively fixed and we have only to establish a natural rate of interest.

English Economist Suggests Possibility of Lower Rates.

A short time ago the English economist, J. M. Keynes, expressed the opinion that if the United States and Great Britain "were to return to the full employment of their resources," they could "save sums so vast that they could not possibly be invested to yield anything approaching 3½ per cent. It is highly probable," Mr. Keynes said, "that the equilibrium rate is not above 2½ per cent for long-term gilt-edged investment, and may be considerably less." Mr. Keynes admits, however, that he is counting upon the Bank of England to pursue liberal open market policies in order to prevent the banks from selling investment holdings upon a revival of business, to release funds for meeting commercial borrowing demands. So he concedes that the future of the investment rate of interest depends upon credit policy as well as upon the openings for profitable investment of funds and the amount of saved income.

In the United States, open market buying policies of the Federal Reserve banks and the Treasury methods of financing tremendous current deficits have been mainly responsible for the creation of excess banking reserves amounting to $1,500,000,000 or more. With such a volume of unemployed bank funds seeking profitable employment and with investment outlets curtailed by the securities act and by other factors, it is easy to understand why current rates of return on high-grade investment issues have been rapidly declining.

Outlook for Interest Depends Upon Government.

Whether investment rates of interest will continue to fall during the period ahead is a question which is being widely debated. Much depends upon the credit policies followed by the reserve system and the fiscal needs of the Government. Those people who believe that the country is now overcapitalized in the sense of having too much machinery and too much capital equipment argue that the long term rate of interest is sure to fall in any case because of limited openings for profitable investment. Others think that the depression has created mistaken ideas about the restricted outlets for new capital. They maintain that deferred demand for machinery to replace obsolete equipment and effect repairs and improvements now amounts to several billions of dollars, and anticipate a rapid capital expansion when business revives and the financial machinery is again functioning. The less optimistic fear that low rates of interest artifically depressed by credit inflation may lead to overinvestment and give rise to errors similar to those of the recent past. The warning just issued by the Reserve Board that excess reserves may engender unwise speculation lends support to this view.

Since the course of long-term interest rates depends upon unpredictable decisions of banking authorities as well as upon unknown economic developments, one expert guess is about as good as another, but the majority opinion appears to favor further declines in interest rates.

Liquidation Again Pushes Cotton Lower

May Closes at 10.73 as General Market Falls 19 to 21 Points.

New York, April 26 (AP).—Slight opening advances met a renewal of liquidation in cotton today which sent prices into new low ground on all positions.

July contracts broke from 11.21 to 10.86 under the pressure, or about 27 points net, and closed at 10.92, with the general market steady at net declines of 19 to 21 points.

An opening advance of 2 to 9 points was followed by some foreign trade buying and covering, but the demand was soon supplied; prices worked gradually lower. The early weakness in grain and silver were contributing factors during the forenoon; and while these markets steadied up later, comparatively slight bulges in cotton brought increased offerings.

Lowest Level Reached.

The lowest level of the day was reached in the late trading, when May sold at 10.73 and October at 11.02, or 21 to 27 points net lower, with July at 10.86 showing a decline of 185 points from the high price of last February. Closing quotations were a few points up from the lowest.

Some of the day's selling was said to be for Southern mill interests, which led to comment on the continued dullness of the primary goods market and talk of possible mill curtailment.

No further May notices were reported and that delivery was relatively quiet and steady during the progress of the decline.

Exports today, 19,302, making 6,499,467 so far this season. Port receipts, 5,814. United States port stocks, 3,026,838.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil broke sharply under renewed liquidation which uncovered stop orders today. The market closed 3 to 15 points net lower. The selling seemed to be influenced by the weakness of cotton, cash lard and stocks, as well as the lower hog markets. Sales were 142 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; May closed, 4.98; July, 5.23; September, 5.47; October, 5.58.

Bethlehem Steel Reports $902,044 Loss

Quarter's Results Compare With '33 Period Deficit of $5,769,451.

New York, April 26 (AP).—Bethlehem Steel Corporation today reported net loss of $902,044 for the first quarter compared with net income of $629,671 for the final quarter of 1933 and deficit of $5,769,451 for the March quarter last year.

Operations of the company and its subsidiaries during the March quarter resulted in total income of $4,025,956 compared with $5,790,023 in the December quarter and operating deficit of $866,144 in the first quarter of 1933.

The value of orders on hand March 30 was $76,345,878 against $67,684,749 on December 31 and $38,360,601 on March 31, 1933. Operations averaged 38.7 per cent of capacity during the first quarter against 26.8 per cent in the December quarter and 15.8 per cent in the 1933 March quarter. Current operations are at approximately 55 per cent of capacity.

Pillsbury Flour Mills has declared a quarterly dividend of 40 cents on the common stock, placing it on a $1.60 annual rate compared with $1 previously. The dividend is payable June 1 to stock of record May 15.

Directors of the Consolidated Gas Co. of New York today declared a dividend of 50 cents on the capital stock. In previous quarters the company disbursed 75 cents.

The dividend is payable June 15 to stock of record May 11.

International Cement Corporation reports for the first quarter net profit of $49,896, equivalent to 8 cents a share on the capital stock, compared with net loss of $180,858 in the March quarter last year.

For the March quarter the Ludlum Steel Co. had a profit of $170,235 after all charges, except Federal taxes, against net loss of $107,756 for the same period last year.

Standard Statistics Co. said tentative first-quarter earnings reports of representative industrial companies were about three times those of 1933. The first 51 companies to report show total net of $18,740,000, as compared with $6,332,000 a year ago. The company said, though, that "comparison is made with the most unfavorable three months' period of 1933."

Cleveland, April 26.—Twenty-five leading steel producers, representing 93 per cent of steel ingot capacity in the United States, last year sustained a total loss of $36,033,120, before payment of dividends and interest on bonds, states the magazine Steel.

Steel-making capacity as a whole was engaged an average of 31 per cent in 1933. In 1932, when steel production was down to 19¾ per cent of capacity, the comparable loss for the same 25 companies was $116,887,789.

While the industry was enabled to reduce its loss considerably last year it still was far from a satisfactory position regarding earnings. On the capitalization of the 25 leading companies, the average loss was 0.91 per cent, compared with a loss of 2.85 per cent in 1932. Steel's previous surveys showed profits of 0.40 per cent in 1931; 4.54 per cent in 1930; and 9.88 per cent in 1929.

The sharp reduction in the average loss last year reemphasizes the fact the turning point for iron and steel occurred in 1932. In that year only two steel producers—National Steel Corporation and Granite City Steel Co.—earned a profit, while in 1933 the number in this group mounted to seven, including the two already mentioned, Inland Steel Co., Allegheny Steel Co., Gulf States Steel Co., Midvale Co., and Ludlum Steel Co.

Losses sustained by many of those producers in the larger groups, however, more than wiped out this encouraging showing. In every case but one the 1933 trend was upward, that is, losses were either greatly reduced or profits were increased.

Reynolds Metals Co. has declared a dividend of 25 per cent in stock, payable June 1 to holdings of record May 15.

Senate Group Votes Wallace License Power

(Associated Press.)

Strengthening of the power of Secretary Wallace to license producers and handlers of farm commodities was approved yesterday by the Senate Agriculture Committee at a surprise executive session.

Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, of the committee said Wallace requested the hearing be closed, although open discussion of the changes in the farm act had been expected.

Committee members said apparently the Secretary sought to save time and that the proposed amendments approved yesterday would be thoroughly reviewed on the Senate floor.

Smith said the committee was unanimous in approving a favorable report, although only 10 or the 19 members were present.

The action to extend the power of the Secretary came at a time when the National Recovery Administration apparently had decided to let lapse its power to license industry.

Power Explained.

Through licensing, the Secretary of Agriculture may bind handlers and distributors of farm products to observe marketing agreements. Only minorities have been licensed thus far, the pacts first being accepted by the majority concerned.

Explaining the amendments, Wallace said they "represent no change in the policies of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration."

Most of the changes relate to technicalities, but among the important additions and clarifications to the present act are:

To make clear the power of the Farm Administration to provide, in benefit contracts with farmers, limitations or reductions in the production of nonbasic commodities.

Basic commodities are those named in the farm act. There were seven originally—wheat, corn, hogs, cotton, rice, tobacco and dairy products. Several others have been added at this session.

Wallace said this power was needed to prevent "a dislocation of the competitive situation in nonbasic commodities resulting from the reduction in acreage or production of basic commodities under benefit contracts."

Other amendments would:

Make it clear that the Secretary has the power through licensing to prevent noncooperating handlers of farm commodities from shipping their products in interstate commerce. This would apply, however, only to a specific commodity whose distributers had been licensed through a marketing agreement.

Licensing of Producers.

License producers, but only where they are at the same time distributers of agricultural commodities.

Specify that the Secretary may prorate amounts that may be purchased from producers through licensing, but only where rice, milk and its products, peanuts, flax, dry edible beans, vegetables, fruits or naval stores are concerned. Such prorations, the Secretary said, may apply to producers only after two-thirds of the growers agree it should be done.

Still another important amendment would give the administrators of the farm act authority to take into account, in determining a parity price for a crop, current farm labor costs, interest on farm indebtedness and taxes on farm property.

Parity price—the goal of the farm act—is defined as the price at which farm commodities must sell to have a purchasing power equal to that in the period from August, 1909, to July, 1914. In the case, however, of tobacco, the base period is that from August, 1919, to July, 1929.

The result of taking additional factors into consideration probably will be the setting of a higher parity price and will result in higher processing taxes.

Wounded by Wife's Mother, He Pleads For Her Freedom

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 26 (Spl.).—In a critical condition in a hospital here from abdominal bullet wounds allegedly inflicted by his mother-in-law, Dean A. Stalnaker, 37, Parkersburg salesman, today begged State Police not to prosecute the woman, Mrs. Samuel Plane, 57, of Keyser.

"I don't want to prosecute my mother-in-law, and I'd like to clear her," Stalnaker said. "I'm not going to die and the woman has had enough trouble already."

The shooting occurred in a family quarrel Monday at a wayside automobile picnic near Salem. Mrs. Plane has been detained at the Doddridge County Jail at West Union, but no warrant has been issued.

We're stumped; Oh, how
Is it Moscow?
Or is it Moscow?

EMPLOYES at Office of Chief of Finance, War, have a unique social plan that is highly successful in promoting friendship in the unit. It is a regular monthly birthday party and is held in one of the large rooms of the division. Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, chief of finance, presides. As each employe enters the room he or she is given a slip of paper, on one of which is written "Cake." The holder of that slip is awarded a big birthday cake.

The winner of the cake then becomes the "mama" or "papa" of the group for the following year. He or she presents each of the "children" with a cup cake, the theory being that we all love the hand that feeds us.

At the April party Miss Mabel Byler (*) won the cake. Others attending the party having April birthdays included Stanley F. Burrows, Mildred F. Bickford, Edith L. Birkle, William A. Christie, E. P. Walt Mason, Himself

Old-Time Faith.

My neighbor, Mrs. Johnsing, has had her share of woe; she lost, in the depression, her little store of dough; and yet she seems unworried, "I have no fear," says she; "the ravens fed Elijah, and they'll provide for me." All day she goes on toiling, amid the suds and smoke; all day she hears the stories of people who are broke; folks say, "Oh, Mrs. Johnsing, you wear a smiling face, while we are all lamenting about the wailing place; where do you get your courage?" "I do not fear," says she; "the exiles had their manna, and there'll be some for me." She's hanging out her washing upon a poplar limb; her mouth is full of clothespins, she hums a cheerful hymn; the sky above is azure, the earth is firm beneath; she has no use for wailing or gnashing of the teeth. The storms of life are transient, they are a thing to mock; her old-time faith is founded on everlasting rock. She does not dread the morrow, she mourns no yesterday, but by her faith supported she goes her tranquil way. Whatever the affliction, it all was foreordained; by those who gravely meet it some merit has been gained. "Whatever the affliction, I do not fear," says she; "the Lord delivered Daniel, and He'll deliver me."
